END OF SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Not Getting Away With It

Sometimes The Perfect Murder – Off Montauk, In Manhattan, In Amagansett, Goes –Awry

By Dan Rattiner

For the second time in a year, the New York City District Attorney has gotten a murder conviction in a case where no body was ever found. The first involved elderly Irene Silverman, a West Side widow and millionairess who befriended a couple of con artists. She disappeared without a trace. They took over her real estate and bank accounts. The jury convicted these two, Sante and Kenneth Kimes, because Kenneth Kimes kept a very accurate diary of what they planned to do. He apparently liked his writing too much to ever do away with it.

This time, a jury convicted a prominent New York plastic surgeon of killing his wife in 1985. On the morning of July 7, that year, a Dr. Robert Bierenbaum called the police to say that his wife had gone for a walk in Central Park to cool off after they had an argument in their upper east side Town House and hadn't come back. She left at 6 a.m. And he had spent the next five hours frantically looking for her before calling the authorities. What he neglected to note, however, was that in his possession there was a flight log he kept — he was an amateur pilot — and it said that on the morning of July 7, 1985, he had rented a Cessna 172N at the Essex County Airport in New Jersey,

The prosecution presented some very remarkable, though all circumstantial evidence. He had been fighting with his wife, all right. He told his psychiatrist that he got so angry, he had choked her cat and tried to flush it down the toilet. At a later session he told his psychiatrist he was so angry with his wife he had strangled her with his bare hands into unconsciousness, only giving up when her body went limp. He had also told this to two other psychiatrists. One of them, a Dr. Stone, actually wrote a letter to the man's wife saying that although there was such a thing as a patient – doctor relationship, and had flown over the ocean for two hours as far out as Montauk. He had entered this in his log in black ink. And then, later, in red ink, he had tried to alter the July date – the seven – to an eight. He was not going to give up on those hours he was accumulating for his next level pilot licence.

"We understand that the charges stem from events that occurred fifteen years ago and did not include patients."

he, the doctor, wanted her to know that her life was in danger and she should get out of there and if she didn't he wanted to make it clear that he, the doctor, would accept no responsibility for what her husband might do. This letter was presented to the Judge as evidence.

Congratulations to KimRobotti of Dan's Papers and her husband Don on the arrival of their eight pound, two ounce baby girl, Diana Marie, born on Election Day, November 7. They have our votes!

The brand new home video, The Tangerine Bear from Betty and Michael Paraskevas was released last week in all stores. This animated video is based on the mother and son's book of the same title. Look for it on ABC Dec 3 at 8:30 p.m.

Len Riggio has very quietly made a gift of more than $20 million to the DIA Foundation.

The place to be to watch the election returns this year in New York was definitely Elaine's. Attending a very exclusive party there were Hamptonites Martha Stewart, Chevy Chase, Kim Catrall, Russell Simmons, Barbara Walters, Ed Koch, Tina Brown, Harvey Weinstein and Michael Bloomberg, also Governor Pataki who to the best of our knowledge has never set foot in the place.

People Magazine has named Brad Pitt as the sexiest man alive in the year 2000. The last time we saw him out here was when he was filming The Devil's Own in Greenport. I think they blew him out a boathouse window.

Polly Onet who has for the last thirty-five years done public relations, marketing, promotion and event coordination has opened a new office in Palm Beach to match the two she has in Southampton.

To celebrate the holiday season Hamptonite Judith Ripka has introduced a beautiful designer ring featuring richly colored stones accented with colored baguettes or white diamonds. Judith has stores in Manhattan, Beverly Hills, San Francisco, Aspen, Manhasset, Short Hills, Chicago, Atlanta and Boca Raton.

Congratulations to Peter Silver, son of Dan's Papers entertainment editor Jan Silver, on his marriage to Michelle Warshaw on Saturday in Manhattan. Peter is a commercial real estate developer/manager and Michelle is a reading specialist for the New York City elementary school system. The couple will reside in Greenwich Village.

One of the fall's most festive evenings, the preview party for the International Fine Arts and Antique Dealers Show, took place at the 7th Regiment Armory Thursday evening. The benefit, for Memorial Sloan Kettering Hospital, brought out a glittering crowd

CORRECTION:

The photo that ran last week with Janet Berg's article on Hospice's Camp Good Grief was incorrect; it depicted a Fresh Air Fund gathering this past summer. We apologize to all concerned.

Home Port

From Larchmont to Laurel, Branford to Bayshore,

Murder

Evidence was also presented to show that Dr. Bierenbaum showed little remorse after his wife's disappearance. He took a house in the Hamptons. He went out there weekends, partied and ordered wine by the case. He bedded nurses and female medical students.

The jury ruled that Dr. Bierenbaum strangled his wife, wrestled a duffelbag containing her 105 pound body out of the apartment, probably left it at the curb while he got his car from the garage, and then drove with it to Essex County Airport for the plane ride to Montauk and the push out the door into the ocean.

It seems amazing to me that all these people who are supposedly committing the perfect crime leave such extraordinary evidence around.

It reminds me of a well to do stockbroker who lived, around that time, in Amagansett on Windmill Lane who reportedly had a "fight" with his wife one night after which, he said, she walked out to cool off and disappeared.

In this case, this was the famous Joseph Pikul case, he neglected to tell people that the following morning he drove to Amagansett Hardware on Main Street, went inside and purchased a shovel, some rope and a green plastic tarp and then asked the clerk to carry his purchases out to his Mercedes parked out front. When the clerk offered to open the trunk and put all the purchases there, the man got very agitated and would not pop the trunk.

One week later, the wife's body was found, wrapped in that same green tarpaulin, in a gully off the shoulder of the New York State Thruway in upstate New York. It was also discovered, at the time of Pikul's arrest, that he may have been a Wall Street stockbroker, but under his tie and jacket he was a cross dresser. He was wearing a bra and panties.

Dr. Bierenbaum, a few years after the "loss" of his wife out of the airplane, got a job at a hospital in Las Vegas, then transferred to another hospital in Minot, North Dakota. He remarried in Minot, a pediatrician, and fathered a daughter, who was twenty-four months old at his conviction.

Life can take terrible turns.

For no particular reason — and this is sort of another story — I went on the Internet and did a little research about Dr. Bierenbaum in his years up in North Dakota. He was the author of a medical paper, with research performed at the local Altru Hospital in Grand Forks. And there was an article in the Grand Forks (North Dakota) Herald.

GRAND FORKS DOCTOR CHARGED IN N.Y. MURDER the headline read.

A reporter, Stephan J. Leo, was sent out to get local reaction.

"Holy Buckets," said Dr. Donald R. Lamb, a fellow plastic surgeon with offices in Fargo with whom Dr. Bierenbaum sometimes consulted.

A spokeswoman at a nearby hospital, UniMed Hospital in Minot, who would not give her name, said "Are you serious? I'm totally shocked!"

Bierenbaum kept a four seater twin engine Commanche airplane at the Minot Airport.

"He just stopped in Monday to say hi," Curt Hussey of the Peitsch Flying Service in Minot told reporter Leo.

Reporter Leo interviewed the people next door.

"They seemed like nice people to me," said Rena DeSautel. The DeSautel's live — in nanny, Carrie Brandt, of Grafton, North Dakota, sometimes looked after the Bierenbaum's daughter.

"Are you really serious?" she asked Leo.

Officials at Altru Hospital where Dr. Bierenbaum worked would not be interviewed, but issued the newspaper a "statement." Here's what it said in its entirety.

"We understand that the charges stem from events that occurred fifteen years ago in New York and did not involve patients."

Dr. Bierenbaum will probably serve 25 years in prison.

Heavy Stuff

Come See The Heavy Stuff On The Dan's Papers Lawn At Noon, November 15

By Dan Rattiner

People passing Dan's Papers during the last twenty-three years may have noticed that there is a big stone sculpture on the front lawn. It wasn't there before. It weighs about three thousand pounds, is four feet tall, and is sitting on a circular concrete pedestal with a stainless steel plaque on it. The plaque reads "Reception" by Jeffrey Parson.

We have another sculpture on our front lawn now — it is made of metal and arrived there just last week and I'll write about that later in this article — but for now, I would like to tell you how "Reception" came to be there.

In 1977, Jeffrey Parson, who lived with his wife Maria on the North Fork, was commissioned to make a sculpture for Guild Hall in East Hampton. Guild Hall had already commissioned and installed a metal sculpture on its front lawn the year before and they were feeling pretty good about it. In fact, that metal sculpture is still there, a five foot high steel cube mounted on its point. You can swing it around. Kids love it.

Jeff spent almost six months making "Reception," but when Guild Hall placed it on the front lawn adjacent to the steel cube, the Ladies Village

Hampton. If they don't like something, they come over and tell you and you better move it. They came over to Guild Hall and they spoke to the director.

What they said was, in essence, what do you think this is, Coney Island?

The Guild Hall director told Jeffrey. Jeffrey, near tears, called me. He would have to move "Reception." Would I mind if he had a bulldozer bring it over to Dan's Papers? There'd be no obligation. And if anyone, driving down the Montauk Highway, saw it on our lawn, maybe they'd buy it. Would that be all right?

I'd be happy to have your rock, I said.

It's a sculpture, Jeffrey said.

Thus began a playful period during which Jeff always referred to it as his sculpture and I always referred to it as Jeff's rock. He'd feign being offended. At least I think he wasn't offended. This went on for years. Today I still call it the rock.

In 1985, Jeff and Maria moved to Garberville, California. They lived in a forest with no running water, no telephone and an electric generator out back. Once a week, they'd go to the food store and post office fifteen miles away.

In 1990, I visited them in California. Jeff and Maria had divorced. Maria was with a boyfriend. Jeff was living with a girlfriend somewhere else.

I think you owe me $3,500, Jeff told me.

I do?

I'll sell "Reception" to you. It's been there long enough. It's yours. That's the price.

I think not, I said, beginning to think that maybe this was the end of our friendship. I reminded Jeff of the terms under which the, uh, sculpture — I was being careful and respectful — had come to be on my front lawn.

It's your property, I said. Take it if you want. Anytime. And if somebody wants to buy it, let me know. I'll be happy to arrange the sale. No commission either.

Late this summer — which was ten years after that — we completed the addition to Dan's Papers, a beautiful wing on our building to the west. We decorated inside. We put up bunting. It was our fortieth year in business. Indeed, next Wednesday, we'll have an open house at our building to show it off. And the rock and the new metal sculpture will be there.

The rock, however, almost wasn't. And it was because it almost wasn't that I arranged for the metal sculpture. Here is how that happened.

Around the first of June, here in the year 2000, Jeff Parson called the office and spoke to our General Manager to say that he thought he had a buyer for the rock. She relayed this information to me. Somebody might come by in a bulldozer to take it away, she said. We shouldn't get upset about this.

It's his rock, I said.

Weeks went by. No bulldozer. But, as we approached the day of the open house, I began to worry that we wouldn't have a sculpture on our front lawn. And, it seemed, there had ALWAYS been this work of art on our front lawn. What if they came and took it away?

And so, I called Kimberley Goff of the Elaine Benson Gallery just down the street and she put me in touch with Ed Haugevik, a prominent Sag Harbor sculptor, who showed me color photographs of what he had available. Down the street at the Benson Gallery they have twenty foot metal giraffes and elks. This is sort of what I had in mind. I was flipping through his three ring binder and wasn't finding any.

It's all abstract, Haugevik said.

Then I found something I liked, seven feet tall, that looked like it was a series of printed letters that somehow got stacked up on top of a pedestal.

This one, I said. Put it up on consignment. If you sell it, fine.

If I sell it, we'll give you a commission.

Just one thing.

What's that.

It has to be too heavy to steal. Bolt it into the ground. It's your property. You'll have to take responsibility for it. I don't want to be responsible if someone walks off with it.

I'll send you a waiver.

And so there is this sculpture, entitled "Geo Form 2," next to the Jeffrey Parson sculpture entitled "Reception." To the east of "Geo Form 2" is a picnic table. To the west of "Reception" is another picnic table. Come and have a picnic on our front lawn under the maple tree. That's what they are there for. And if either of the sculptures interest you, let me know. There's a guy named Vinnie Grimes in Montauk who can come with a bulldozer.

But, to be honest, I like our sculpture garden and hope you take a pass. •

Acts Of Dumbness

Southold Town To Get The Works, But Not The Case Around The Works

By Dan Rattiner

Two weeks ago, residents of Southold were informed that the builder of the new school now going up had misled them about the costs by nearly two million dollars. This is a huge amount of money for a small town. And the residents wonder how this could happen. Turned out the builder had bid on the project and, like everybody else, said his bid included "the whole works." What he really meant, however, was that there was a "works," but you also needed a case to go around the works. Missing were about $200,000 worth of furniture that was supposed to be included and a whole lot of construction stuff that was supposed to be included. Why hadn't anybody checked?

This has proved to be a great embarrassment for the Southold School Board. The approved bond won't be enough to complete the job. And it proves once again, as I have often pointed out in these pages, that in the cities the politicians are often smart and corrupt, but in the country they are sometimes honest but dumb.

In other words, nobody's perfect.

On the other hand, there is the extraordinary story of what happened in the State House in Phoenix, Arizona early in the morning of April 8, 2000. Governor Jane Dee Hull had just settled in at her desk when an aide thumped a 95 page amendment in front of her and told her the legislature had passed it in an all night session and it needed her signature.

The Governor looked at it. It was an amendment to the Arizona Clean Air Act. A summary of it, attached, said citizens who bought new cars and converted them to alternate fuels after January 1, 2000 would be reimbursed for the conversion cost by the State. In addition, the State would pay 30% of the cost of the purchase of the car. Creating this law would impact the $6 billion State budget less than $5 million a year. It was underway to stop members of the legislature caught up in all of this from resigning.

Here is how the residents of Arizona, the only state in America that refused to declare Martin Luther King Day a Holiday, are using this new law.

You buy a $30,000 SUV and spend $6,000 to install a propane tank. The State reimburses you $6,000 for the conversion to propane. Then they pay you — and as you'll see there is a mathematical loophole here — 30% of the total of $36,000 you pay for the car and conversion combined. You've bought a $36,000 car for $19,200.

Furthermore, there is nothing in the law that says you have to use the propane tank, which is a good thing since the propane is almost impossible to get. There are only four propane stations in Phoenix. There are none anywhere else in Arizona.

So far, more than 40,000 people have rushed to their dealers to buy new cars at almost half price. And nobody uses propane. Indeed, the tank of choice, since everybody knows this is a stupid scam, is just four gallons. It's cheap to install. And it doesn't take up much room.

"What's really going on here," one legislator said, "is that people are polluting MORE because of this new law. They are buying bigger, less efficient cars than they would have."

Attempts to save the state from bankruptcy include passing a one year moratorium on the

Governor Hull looked for the page where she was supposed to sign the bill into law, found it, and signed it. Then all hell broke loose.

Beginning the next day, and for days and weeks afterwards, there seemed to be a tremendous run on the purchase of new cars in Arizona. At first the Governor was pleased. But then she became alarmed. By November 1, the general populace had applied for and gotten from the State almost $600 million, 10% of the State's budget, for the purchase of new automobiles. And yet not one new car was using alternate fuels.

Efforts are now underway to stop this new law, to prosecute the sponsor of the bill, House Speaker Jeff Groscost, (aptly named) and to keep the state from declaring bankruptcy. There are also efforts

The Aliens Land

Meteor From Mars Hits Antarctica And Who Gets Out From Inside Is Sort Of A Shock

By Dan Rattiner

Mars is the closest planet to Earth. And for centuries, men have written stories about men from Mars arriving on Earth and in short order taking over the place. Mars Attacks is the title of dozens of books over the years and at least two movies.

But is it possible that Mars has already attacked and we have just gotten used to it? This is the gist of a theory, no, an entire scenario being put forth by some very credible scientists from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena and other places.

What has sparked the interest of these scientists is the recent discovery of a meteorite known as ALH84001, which crashed into Antarctica 13,000 years ago. It is about a foot across and weighs about forty pounds. It landed intact. And scientists have been studying it with ever increasing interest and ever more sophisticated tools since it was found in the early 1980s and transported to civilization. Probed and chipped, scientists have learned it has a hollow interior and in spite of the fact that it should have heated upwards of 300 degrees fahrenheit during its journey, there is no evidence of any high heat in that hollow interior. Indeed, there is evidence that suggests living things on Mars made the journey — we're talking tiny bacteria sized aliens here — and, unable to get out, lived for a short time and then expired. There are what appear to be fossilized remains of these bacteria still inside.

I don't know about you, but what springs to mind with the recent report of this scientific discovery, is the birth and early childhood of Superman in the comic strips. Remember the movie? Marlon Brando had a cameo appearance at the start of it as Superman's father, a man in a white robe on the planet Krypton, which was in desperate environmental trouble and would soon explode. Brando and Susannah York, who plays Superman's mother, load this little baby with superpowers into a rocketship and hurl him off into space where he soon lands alongside a railroad track in midwestern America in about 1938. A that I find very hard to believe. The first is that a piece of Mars can, all by itself, fly off that planet and after a year of flying through space hit the Earth with such accuracy. Scientists say it happens all the time, not only on Mars, but also on other planets including ours. (Our rocks hit Mars.) A big windstorm comes up. There are tornadoes, hurricanes. A bit of this and that careens out of the atmosphere into the cosmos. A Dr. H. Jay Melosh, who is a planetary science professor at the University of Arizona explained it this way.

"It's kind of like squeezing a watermelon seed between your fingers."

The other thing I find hard to believe is that there is not

...more than five billion Mars rocks have struck the Earth over the last four billion years.

farmer named Kent driving an old Ford sees this little rocketship plow up the landscape, pulls his car over, and finds the little lad in his swaddling clothes — he seems about fifteen months old — and takes him home. It's a Christopher Reeve movie. You know the rest.

Scientists say this meteorite that flew off of Mars is only one of many that have landed on Earth, probably with living things on board. Dr. Joseph Kirschvink, who is a professor of geobiology at CIT, thinks that years ago, long before Mars burned out into a waterless desert which it appears to have done to get where it is now, it was a fertile place which was more conducive to creating living things than the Earth ever was.

That was a billion years ago.

"Conceivably, we're all Martians," he has said.

Or as the cartoon character Pogo has said, "We have met the enemy and he is us."

There are two aspects to all of this, however, just this one rock from Mars here on Earth but a whole mess of them. Indeed, now that our Mars Explorer space ship has analyzed the soil of that planet, archeologists have identified hundreds of such Mars rocks.

Five years ago Dr. Curt Mileikowsky, who is currently a physicist in Stockholm, but before that was the CEO of the Saab automobile company, has done calculations at the Royal Institute of Technology in that city and concluded that in the scheme of things, more than five billion Mars rocks have struck the Earth over the last four billion years, (do the math — it's one a year), and in return, four billion Earth rocks have struck Mars during the last ten billion years. The greater frequency for incoming over outgoing is because gravity is stronger here than there.

Maybe it's the Men here on Earth who are the aliens from Mars. And the Women are from someplace else. Just a thought.

review: the full monty

By Jan Silver

So, how is the new Broadway musical comedy everyone's talking about? It's hip, lots of fun and, yes, they do take it all off — but, by the time the show gets to that scene, it is absolutely fitting and not a bit gratuitous.

By now almost everyone must know the show's story is taken from the popular British movie of the same title. With music and lyrics written by Broadway "neophyte" David Yazbek and the book (story) adapted by award-winning playwright Terrence McNally (of Bridgehampton), the locale has shifted from Sheffield, England, to Buffalo, New York.

The action revolves around the personal lives of four unemployed steelworkers, their just-fired boss and a restless retiree—all in need of jobs and money. Two of the men discover how popular male strippers make seemingly easy money, and the fun-plus-complications begin.

Composer/lyricist David Yazbek is a recording artist, theatrical and television composer, and a comedy writer. Although the show's producers took a chance on an "unknown" Broadway name—Yazbek was recommended by his composer friend Adam Guettel, Richard Rodgers' grandson — Yazbek has proven talents. From the first note of the spirited overture — led enthusiastically by conductor Kimberly Grigsby—to the big finale, "Let It Go," most of the songs are upbeat.

Yazbek created more than a dozen tunes for the show. His lyrics are rhyming, witty and clever, often with touches of mocking humor. Many songs are serio-comic, such as "Scrap," "(I'm A) Man," "Big-Ass Rock," "Big Black Man" and "Michael Jordan's Ball" in the first act. And, since Terrence McNally is a master at writing brief, loving, compassionate scenes, Yazbek composed a few ballads ("You Rule My World" and "You Walk With Me").

The six leading men have also been publicized as "unknowns," but they are all talented musical comedy veterans. Andre de Shields (Noah "Horse" T. Simmons) is a smooth dancer and a fine character actor here, as are the five other amateur strippers: Patrick Wilson (Jerry Lukowski, the divorced father), John Ellison Conlee (Dave Bukatinsky, the chubby one), Jason Danieley (Malcom MacGregor, the mama's boy), Romain Fruge (Ethan Girard, the somewhat dim one) and Marcus Neville (Harold Nichols, the financially-overextended executive).

The female characters are slightly more stereotypical than the men, but the actresses play them with loving affection: Annie Golden (Dave's wife Georgie), Emily Skinner (Harold's wife Vicki), Lisa Datz (Jerry's ex-wife Pam), and grande dame Kathleen Freeman (Jeanette Burmeister, the accompanist) who is immediately recognizable from hundreds of films and TV shows. Thomas Michael Fiss plays Nathan Lukowski, Jerry and Pam's pre-teen son, in a very natural, "way cool" manner at the performance I saw (he alternates the role with Nicholas Cutro). Denis Jones starts the entire show off with a lively impersonation of famous stripper Buddy "Keno" Walsh.

Jack O'Brien, an experienced theater director and artistic director of San Diego's Old Globe Theater where The Full Monty previewed earlier this year, has done a rousing job of staging this musical. Jerry Mitchell's choreography is a great blend of Broadway pizzazz and athleticism. The minimal, versatile set by John Arnone, with lighting by Howell Binkley and sound design by John Clark, suits the quick scenes. Robert Morgan has costumed the cast in realistic duds. Harold Wheeler orchestrated Yazbek's score and Zane Mark created the dance music arrangements. Fox Searchlight Pictures, Lindsay Law and Thomas Hall produced the show.

The Full Monty plays at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre on Tuesday through Saturday evenings, with Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday matinees. For tickets, call Telecharge at 212-239-6200 or 800-432-7250.

Media Violence

Murder And Mayhem And Its Effects On Children Discussed In Sag Harbor

By Ben Amato

"Violence is a learned behavior," said Daphne White, director of the Lion and Lamb Project, and the message she delivered during a workshop at the Bay Street Theatre was that violence is a commodity being marketed to us in movies, music, television and video games. Five years ago, she formed the Lion and Lamb Project, whose mission is to stop the marketing of violence to children. Through workshops like the one held last week in Sag Harbor, appearances before the Federal Trade Commission and stories on CNN and ABC, Daphne has maintained that violence is not child's play and its effects on children and society is measurable, monstrous and at times horrific.

"We have the highest homicide rate of any industrialized country. Eight hundred percent higher. There are 25,000 murders per year. More people are killed now, per year, than at the height of the Vietnam War. Homicide is the tenth leading cause of death and among the youth, it's even higher.

Daphne places much of the blame for these startling statistics on the way entertainment companies bombard all segments of our society with violent messages, almost from birth. "Violence is fun, excitement, power. It is confusing for kids to grow up in this culture.

"Media violence is a public health issue and is being treated as such by all major public health organizations.... the research is all one sided. Viewing violence increases violence." She cited report after report, including meta-analysis reports from the Surgeon General's Commission, dated 1972, 1982 and 1992. "Early exposure causes life long effects. And learned behavior is hard to change."

Rambo started out with a body count of sixty-two and by the time Rambo 3 smashed onto the screen, 106 bodies were needed to satisfy the audience.

Turning on the television can prove the predominance of violence being injected into our minds on a daily basis. Adult television contains eight to ten violent acts per hour yet Saturday morning kids' shows contain twenty to twenty-five violent acts per hour. "And the types are getting worse," added Daphne. But the message is the same for all ages.

"Murder is fun," said Ms. White, with ironic disgust.

"Television violence causes aggression increases. Children can't distinguish between fantasy and reality. At eight years old their fantasy world melts away." But, according to Daphne and the results of many public health research studies, there are obvious health effects associated with children watching violent television shows. There is a "victim effect" where paranoia replaces nursery rhymes. The "bystander effects" slowly desensitize viewers to ever-increasing disturbing acts of mayhem. An appetite for violence appears, with viewers needing more and more violence to get off. "There's even a form of sensory deprivation. You know when your kids' eyes glaze over from watching too much television." Depression, obesity, high blood pressure and heart disease are all measurable effects noted among children who are addicted to television and media violence.

The key word in the toy industry is KAGOY: kids are getting older younger. "Children are leaving toys for video games. They go from toys to Gameboy at six or eight, to violent video games at eight to twelve." Daphne then went on to illustrate exactly what the most popular violent video games, like Duke Nukem and Resident Evil, teach their young players. Violence settles disputes, it's fun, and it shows the value of acting out aggressively. It fosters violent competition and one final lesson, one must destroy an enemy completely.

"Play is how children learn. Young people are trained to shoot at humans. The entertainment industry conditions children like the military does to its soldiers." In a lesson Daphne learned at the E3, the annual video game fair, the point of most video games are "who do you kill and when do you kill them."

"Violence is a commodity and is being sold to ever younger children. There is money to be made from children. The youngest age group marketers go after is from 0 to 2. Our culture is mixed up. We tell children that violence is bad, but here is a toy gun. All children are influenced by these things."

George Gerbner produced a video detailing the way movies influence the behavior of children. Ms. White played a segment of this film, The Killing Screens, for the 150 people attending her workshop. "Happy violence" is the term Gerbner used to describe the mayhem that is daily projected at theaters. "Violence is very cheap to produce but remakes must have their violence doubled." He cited numbers very hard to argue with. Robocop featured thirty-two corpses in its original; in Robocop II, eighty-one people died. Deathwish contained nine dead bodies. Deathwish II had fifty-two. Rambo started with a body count of sixty-two and by the time Rambo 3 smashed onto the screen, 106 bodies were needed to satisfy the audience. Even classics like The Godfather had an escalating fatality rate, going from twelve to eighteen to fifteen-three when this gangster trilogy ended. But Gerbner's most violent film was the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, with over 130 acts of violence recorded per hour.

"President Clinton mandated a study by the Federal Trade Commission concerning why adult advertisements are aimed at teens. 'R' rated movies are being advertised to kids 12 and up." Daphne went on to explain that even Disney is guilty of marketing R rated films towards children. "The film Judge Dredd, dealing with urban anarchy and street war, was test marketed on kids 13 to 16 years old. More than 100 kids were tested." Daphne posed the question, why did Disney have children in their testing group if they are not allowed to view the R rated film.

"There's a lot of money and power denying all of this and the research," said Daphne, referring to the connection between media violence and the epidemic of violence that infects our culture. "Twenty billion dollars are marketed at kids. Toy manufacturers have a tremendous sense of denial. The president of the Toy Manufacturers of America, David Milton, denies the research yet he confided in me that he won't let his children play with guns."

At the conclusion of the workshop, Daphne introduced Sabrina Steger, a nurse from Paducah, Kentucky. Her daughter, Casey, went to Heath High School one day and did not come back. Fifteen year old Michael Carneal wanted to become a hero, like the ones from the violent video games he played. He wanted to act out a scene he played and replayed and replayed from his favorite film, Basketball Diaries. The scene had the hero of the film entering a school shooting. So he stole a twenty-two. cal. pistol and decided to kill. Casey and two other students died and five others were injured.

"My little girl was fifteen. Her name was Casey. In the thirty-five months since she was killed, she missed two proms, four homecomings and a graduation where her little sister walked across the stage to get her diploma. I am a nurse and I have had to tell parents that their child is dead. I always wondered what if it was my child that died. You don't know what happens to a family when the coffin is closed."

"This kid was fourteen when he entered the school and shot and killed my daughter. It's unimaginable to look into a coffin and see your baby lying there. It's tough to pick out tombstones when we should be talking colleges. These kids don't see that. My two other children are different now. Their childhood is over. It ended that day. We're the forgotten grievers."

"I remember my last conversation I had with my daughter. It was one hour before she was killed," Sabrina paused and composed herself. With regret she admitted, "I can't firmly say that the last words she heard her momma say were 'I love you'." She took a deep breath and her words packed with emotion closed the workshop, "I want to feel that I can do something to make Casey's death a little less useless."

Simple changes can be within each family to lessen the effects of media violence on children. Daphne suggested buying non-violent games that promote creativity and problem solving. Television viewing should be closely monitored. Just taking away violent toys might not be the answer, "but don't buy more. Take one away each week. Maybe take the most violent toy away first. This can lead to a discussion with your kids about which one is the most violent."

At www.lionlamb.org, Daphne has created a website filled with information about the damage media has done and ways parents can bond together to change our culture's way of thinking. "Who would have imagined the change in attitudes about cigarette smoking? Drunk driving was once much more accepted than today. Littering and polluting also. We are talking about a change in cultural patterns, but it can be done."

The workshop ended with a small reception in the Bay Street Theatre's lobby, where many used the opportunity to speak with Daphne and Sabrina. Lion and Lamb Parent Action Kits were offered and purchased by the audience, along with T-shirts and other fund raising merchandise. All were impressed with the message and the illuminating way this organization is exposing media violence as a cultural disease.

"The workshop was outstanding. This is a very important issue," said Roy Scheider, who attended this workshop. "I hope an organization in our community grows to fight this. It's about greed. Violence is a money making venture."

"There is no reason to sell violence to children. Why teach them violence when you can teach them anger management skills," Daphne emphasized. The Lion and Lamb Project is out to teach more than that, for it hopes to teach people that their efforts can make a difference, if they just give peace a chance.

The "Mad Cow" Sheep

They Haven't Come To Plum Island Yet, But The Government Is Working On It

By Jerry Cimisi

The "mad cow" sheep have not arrived at Plum Island yet. There is the issue of whether these sheep have mad cow disease in the first place. Two of the three flocks in Vermont, which the United States Department of Agriculture insists may have been exposed to what's commonly called mad cow disease, are still being retained by their owners in a legal battle that has yet to complete its passage through the courts.

The sheep in question totaled about 355 for the three flocks; after one owner sold his flock to the government, the remaining total is about 305. They are East Friesian dairy sheep that were imported (or born from those imported) from Belgium in 1996. The importation of the animals went through the proper channels; but in 1998, two years after the sheep came here, the government told the owners of the sheep that the animals might have been exposed to mad cow disease in Belgium.

Linda Faillace, who, with her husband Larry, owns 105 (they originally imported seventy) of the sheep in question, said in a recent interview, "The USDA had admitted to withholding evidence." She contends that the test results the USDA has touted that "proved" the sheep had some type of encephalopathy were in fact seriously flawed.

This past summer, USDA Secretary Dan Glickman issued a statement of emergency in regards to the sheep, saying that new evidence had come to light to the effect that the sheep, before coming to America, may have been exposed to contaminated feed. Glickman demanded that the owners of the sheep accept the government's payment for the animals, which would then be destroyed and studied.

A number of the sheep, some dead, some alive, would be shipped to the Animal Disease Research Center on Plum Island, off Long Island's North Fork. This didn't sit well with Southold Town, which passed a resolution saying the sheep could not be transported across its borders. USDA officials say that the only way any person or animal could contract BSE from any animal with it would be to eat that animal.

Mad cow disease is BSE, or Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy, a disease that has mainly sticken cows since it was first diagnosed in Britain in 1986. BSE attacks the brain (destroying it so the brain tissue looks sponge-like) and is always fatal. There is a human variation of the disease, vCJD, which has afflicted over eighty people in Britain.

The disease was spread among cattle by feeding them rendered parts of other cattle, a longtime common practice in the livestock industry. Because of BSE that practice has been discontinued, both in Europe and America. Europe and the U.S.

Larry Faillace with his East Friesian sheep banned imports of British beef. The European Union only recently lifted the ban, though France still maintains it. As does the U.S.

Not surprisingly, the British beef industry lost a good deal of money. And the owners of one of progeny of the imported dams before trade was resumed."

In 1996, the Faillaces purchased seventy East Friesian dairy sheep from Belgium. This type of sheep produces ten times the milk that the typical dairy sheep produces. "Where an American sheep might produce 100 pounds of milk per year, the East Friesian will produce 1,000 pounds," said Mrs. Faillace.

Two years later, in July, 1998, "the USDA came to our farm and said they wanted to buy our animals because the sheep may have had contact with mad cow. We knew that no sheep had ever gotten mad cow, and the USDA has been looking very diligently since 1992. We told the USDA to test all our sheep. There is a newly developed eyelid test that has 98 percent efficiency. The USDA said they didn't want to test, they wanted to buy. They asked if we would sell any animals we were going to cull. We agreed. Over two years we sold them a dozen sheep."

In August, 1998, Linda Detwiler of the USDA asked the Faillaces if they would agree to a voluntary quarantine. They did. "Detwiler said there was new information coming out in Europe about mad cow. It was supposed to be presented at a conference in September, but in fact nothing new came out. We met with Linda Detwiler on October 8, 1998. We said to her there was no new information, lift the quarantine. The response we got was that we were going to have to sell.

"The next day a USDA representative showed up with formal papers for the quarantine. He told us that if we went to the media we'd be put out of business. 'They've done it before,' he said."

When asked if this were a friendly warning or a threatening one, Mrs. Faillace said, "Maybe a the flocks of the Vermont sheep, Larry and Linda Faillace, contend the U.S. government's concerns are based more on economics than science: that even the slightest suggestion that mad cow exists in the U.S. will cause countries such as Japan and Korea, which are big importers of American beef, to boycott American meat.

Of the the three flocks, one farmer surrendered his sheep to the USDA. Houghton Freeman and the Faillaces have fought the agency's order. In the process of discovery for their court battle, the Faillaces came into possession of two internal USDA memos delineating the government's concerns.

Linda Detwiler, the Senior Staff Veterinarian for the USDA, sent Commissioner Leon Graves a memo from Scott Sindelar of the Foreign Agriculture Service. Sindelar's memo related that "officials from Korea's National Veterinary Research and Quarantine Service 'had expressed their concerns regarding recent articles in the U.S. press that describe the USDA's plans to eradicate 365 sheep in Vermont due to concerns over BSE. The officials were apparently seeking some assurances that the United States does not have a BSE problem.'" little of both. Linda Detwiler had repeatedly told us it was important that this did not get out in the media because it might start a panic over BSE."

But the inevitable happened. "In October, 1999," Mrs. Faillace went on, "Jan Carney, the Vermont Commissioner of Health, found out about the sheep in quarantine. There is a bit of rivalry between Vermont Commissioner of Health and the Vermont Commissioner of Agriculture. Carney notified a local television station in Burlington."

Eventually, the Faillaces, as well as Houghton Freeman, took the USDA to court to keep the government from taking the sheep. The USDA responded by taking the farmers to court. Mrs. Faillace related, "The judge said all legal processes must be gone through."

During the discovery process, along with the USDA internal memos, the Faillaces received "440 negative test results from the sheep we had given. In September, 1999, the USDA had received a FOIA from 20/20 in regards to testing for Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (TSE) in the U.S. I don't know what they got back, but 20/20 did not wind up airing anything on the subject."

The Faillaces and Freeman were able to glean one thousand pages of USDA documents in the process of their legal suit. The entirety of this information may not have been disclosed to USDA Secretary Dan Glickman before he made the decision that the sheep must be destroyed. The USDA had said it had discovered a virus of foreign origin in the sheep, but tests results obtained under a FOIA by a Vermont newspaper, The Valley Reporter, revealed that the results of an eyelid biopsy test showed negative results when given to the sheep who had tested positive in the western blot test.

It was the brains of the sheep that were tested for a marker of TSE, a not yet fully understood prion protein, but it takes years for this protein to reach the brain. The prion is first present in the peripheral nervous system. Each of the sheep the USDA tested were less than fourteen months old.

On March 25, 1999, the Faillaces met with USDA officials in Washington, D.C. The Faillaces had asked three European experts on TSE to attend: one was the person in charge of Belgium testing for BSE, another was a sheep veterinarian whom the Faillaces had worked with when they had first imported the sheep from Belgium.

"We all sat down and introduced ourselves and the Europeans provided a good deal of information. There had not only been no cases of BSE in sheep anywhere, but there had been no cases of scrapie (a related disease fatal to sheep but not harmful to humans) in East Friesian sheep. We thought if the USDA heard what the Europeans had to say, things might go our way."

The result of the meeting was that the USDA stated even if there is no evidence any sheep worldwide had contracted BSE, the sheep brought into the country by Ag-Innovations, the Faillaces' business, "must be destroyed as a conservative measure to prevent introduction of BSE in the U.S."

Mrs. Faillace added, "We had been told by Detwiler that when we had gotten the sheep in '96 it wasn't known that under laboratory conditions sheep had been infected with BSE. That wasn't true. Work had been done on this in 1993. Detwiler said she hadn't known about this work until '98."

Implying that the USDA had made up its mind beforehand, Mrs. Faillace added that the USDA did not ask any questions of the European experts.

She added, "Joe Gibbs of the National Institute of Health, who has been working on TSEs for years, said he would not hesitate to eat a leg of our lamb, but if the U.S. was perceived to have BSE it would cause the stock market to crash."

Among the one thousand pages of USDA documents was a memo saying that USDA officials should "act sympathetic" to the owners of the sheep.

On October 30, a federal court ruled that the USDA must pay the Faillaces and Freeman a total of $2.4 million in order to destroy the farmers' sheep. The judge ruled that the USDA must pay this money by November 17. But Freeman and the Faillaces continue to say they will not give up the sheep. Vermont's senators have added $2.4 million to a USDA appropriations bill as compensation for the sheep. According to a Reuters report, Freeman says the value of his flock is about $3 million, while the Faillaces say their business has a value of $11 million.

This past summer Belgium officials said they were willing to take back the sheep, but the USDA apparently did not find that a suitable solution.

Mrs. Faillace contends that the USDA has taken this tact with the Friesian sheep due to pressure from the U.S. cattle industry, as well as the pharmaceutical industry, in which many bovine based-substances are commonly used. •

1960 — 2000 OPEN HOUSE Dan's Papers

NOVEMBER 8 and 15
12 NOON

COME SEE OUR NEW ADDITION

2221 MONTAUK HIGHWAY
BRIDGEHAMPTON, NEW YORK

By Dan Rattiner

Since April, Ronne Fisher, the wife of real estate man Alan Fisher, has been busy planning what is probably the largest single charity event in the City of New York: The Promise Ball. The event, which is scheduled for November 11 at the Waldorf Astoria, should raise somewhere between $2.5 and $3 million in one night for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation. Ronne, who has a house in East Hampton and also in Manhattan, is the chairperson of this event, and has been for the last three years.

I met with Ronne for coffee the other day and we talked about this extraordinary event. Dinner tickets are $2,000 a couple, $1,000 per person and somewhere around 800 or 900 people are expected to attend in full tie and tails for what will be a splendid New York evening. There will be a cocktail party featuring a silent auction and a main dinner and then entertainment provided by Steve Martin who is flying in from California to donate his services at the request of a friend.

Ronne, who is in her mid-forties, has three children, the youngest of whom was diagnosed with Juvenile Diabetes five years ago. The following autumn she and her husband went to this event as guests. Since then, Ronne has chaired this event every year.

I asked her how she came to be chosen and she told me.

"The Promise Ball was founded by Irwin and Carol Lurie and a small group of other parents thirty years ago. Many of the original members are still active, particularly Carol, who has a way of knowing what people can do and when they're right for something so, if she asks you, you don't say no. Generally, I think the chairperson is selected for one of three things, but preferably all three: They should be able to create the event with a certain style, have a talent for orchestrating and organizing and, most importantly, have the resources to raise money because that's what this is all about."

Ronne was born on Long Island, in Merrick. "Montauk seemed like the end of the earth back then," she said. She went to the Smith Street School and then to the Mephram High School in Bellmore where she was a cheerleader for the basketball and football teams. In the late 1960's she went to Barnard where, because of her interests, she became the first person to graduate from that school with a major in architectural studies.

"I created that department along with professor Dorothea Nyberg. I wanted to go to the Columbia School of Architecture and, by getting this new degree at Barnard, I was able to combine my senior year with my first year of architectural school."

Ronne was at Columbia to witness the historic student uprisings that shut the school down in April of 1968.

"The University turned into a police state. The police were on horseback surrounding most of the campus. There were no classes for a considerable time. Every flower child just came out of the woodwork. At the time, I remember being very angry about it because I had been heading for an A in physics and suddenly they no longer gave letter grades. It was either pass or fail, so I lost my A."

Ronne had always been interested in architecture, interior design, specifically.

"I always sketched floor plans. Mom was an interior designer so I learned about design early.

Who's Here:

Ronne Fisher Designer

I thought it was a good way of defining myself."

Ronne met the man she was to marry, Alan Fisher, when she was in high school. "He was on the basketball team, he was a year older than I was and he was a friend of my brother's. I met him one day as we were going to a basketball game in a summer basketball league that was held in Roosevelt. In fact, many of the New York basketball stars played in that league. When Alan went to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, he played on the Varsity team and it was in his last year there that Julius Irving joined the team.

Ronne and Alan were married in 1971 and took up residence on the East Side. Today, Alan Fisher's firm, Fisher & Co., owns and manages properties in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens; they are mostly residential properties but they also own some shopping centers around the country.

As for Ronne, when she graduated architectural school she went to work for Robert A. M. Stern, an architect who had been one of her instructors. "I worked there fifteen years," she said, "with time off for my kids. Because of my kids and my need to be with them, I wanted to be a part of the team of architects working for Stern, rather than one of the main architects of the special projects. I did a number of interiors for Stern. One is in a beautiful home that we did in Montauk on the cliffs."

Ronne and Alan have three children: a daughter, twenty-five, is a graduate of the Harvard School of Education and is teaching in Boston; another daughter, twenty-one, is a senior at Penn. They also have a son, who is thirteen.

After fifteen years with Stern, Ronne became chairman of the decorator showhouse to raise money for the Kipps Bay Boys and Girls Club. She was chairperson for six years and, typically, they would raise $800,000 to a $1 million a year. It also involved work she liked since a lot of these interior design firms had to set up for each of these projects. "It was like being a construction supervisor," she said.

Ronne and her husband first came out to the Hamptons with some friends when they were in college in the late 1970s. They rented a house in East Hampton Village on Mill Hill and Dayton Lane; they always liked being in town. And when they came out, Ronne said, they'd like to do a whole lot of nothing. She would read and cook – she loves to cook and considers herself well trained at it. More recently, for the last two years, she's run the New York City Marathon, and this year she ran associated with the Achilles Track Club where she went on the road as an assistant to a disabled runner. Also more recently, Ronne and her husband have built a beautiful home for themselves in East Hampton in what she calls the Adirondack style, deep in the woods.

As for The Promise Ball, she said that most of the work is done by the various committees and that her job is to sit at the head of the table and see about creating goals to design what the event will look like and what the timing of the evening will be. This year, between 6 and 8 p.m., the silent auction and the cocktail party will consist of more than forty items, including tickets to the Triple Crown, the Super Bowl, Vail and the Nickelodeon Kids Awards. Tony Bennett is donating some of his artwork to be auctioned off and the Palm restaurant is giving 'dinner for two' at each of their eighteen restaurants around the country. During the auction, there is a temporary shopping mall of boutiques set up, including William Wayne Gifts, Suarez Hand Bags, Cashmere New York Sweaters, Facconable Mens French Sportswear, Royal Wine Merchants and Jaded Jewelry.

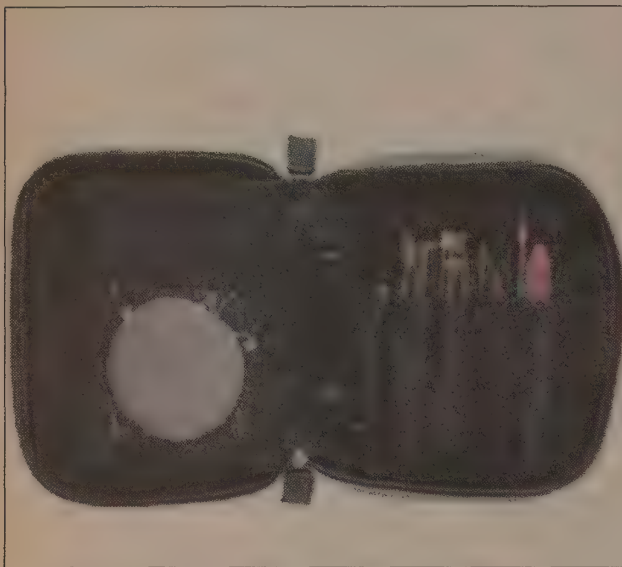

The boutiques will be open all evening and after cocktails comes an International buffet and gambling in which the rules are that you can't take your winnings home. You have to spend them at the boutiques where everything is donated to the charity.

During dinner there is a live auction and dancing. The live auction should raise about $200,000 in less than five minutes. It is given directly to a research lab that is in line for funding or to directly help some of the children with the illness, a number of whom will be at the event. Over dessert and coffee Steve Martin will provide entertainment. "How the Waldorf will look," Ronnie says, "is going to be a surprise."

In her first year as chairperson, because the honoree was Dave Cheketts, president of Madison Square Garden, Ronne designed the ballroom to look like a tented and brightly and colorfully lit sporting arena. During her second year, she did considerable research on how the Waldorf Astoria looked at the turn of the century: She brought in chandeliers and different Victorian designs for all of the tables, all donated. •

Trish McEvoy Deluxe Brush Set – $493

Beauty is skin deep. Kind of pricey, this is a cosmetic brush set you really can't afford to pass it up. The Deluxe Brush Set consists of fifteen brushes and a planner for $493 and is also available separately. This chic uptown cosmetic makeup planner is not only a compact case that houses and protects your brush collection, but Trish's trademark make-up planner is actually a makeup notebook designed to organize your makeup and save you time. There is also a brush cleaner that will maintain your professional brushes along with a quick and convenient spray on/wipe off product. Available at Saks Fifth Avenue, Main Street in Southampton. Boxology Cow-Jumped-Over-The-Moon Puzzle Box – $395

Don't be puzzled over this Large Cow-Jumped-Over-The-Moon Puzzle Box. This beautifully detailed bi-level puzzle box inspired by the popular limerick is designed by artist Richard Rothbard and handmade by his team of craftspeople. The cow is removable and unlocks the top of the box, which slides open to reveal the cat and the fiddle. Remove the dog key to open the lower box holding the fork and spoon. The wood is polished and finished with a clear lacquer and the artist's name is burned into the bottom of each box. Can be obtained in a variety of finishes, measures 2" deep by 15" in diameter. Available at Boxology, Slate Hill, New York. Photo courtesy of Bestselections.com.

The Celtic Chess Set – $650

Looking for the perfect gift for the perfect man in your life? The unique hand-sculpted and hand-painted design of this chess set is rooted in Celtic history. Each character represents a particular Celtic image or artifact involved in the infamous Battle of Clontarf. The chessboard's wooden base is covered with a marblized veneer. This is a gift for the man or woman who has just about everything. Available at The Celtic Secret, Jobs Lane, Southampton. Photo courtesy of Bestselections.com.

Dan's Papers

Hosted By
Guy DeFraumeni & Sarah Halsey

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival

Featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here.

Saturday, November 11th – Love Walked In

A hot neo-noir thriller singed with romance. Denis Leary, Aitana Sanchez-Gijon and Terence Stamp star in a three-way twist of conspiracy, seduction and blackmail.

Saturday, November 18th – Sweet Liberty

Written and directed by Alan Alda who also stars with the redoubtable Michael Caine who rollicks through this likeable comedic film. Other stars include photogenic Sag Harbor and its jolly inhabitants. They light up an already lighter-than-air story of making of a historical movie... Hollywood style!

Saturday, November 25th - No Movie

Closed for Thanksgiving Vacation

Saturday, December 2nd – For Love Or Money

Michael J. Fox is the concierge of a fancy New York hotel with enough chutzpah, ambition and goodness to make a million. When it comes to love, see him storm Southampton beach society by helicopter.

Saturday, December 9th – Whispers In The Dark

Murders more than wicked! They are rife with psychopathia sexualis, bondage, sadism and explicit nudity and are all strung out with chills and thrills. The kinky doings include (would you believe?) nice Alan Alda and his extra nice town, Water Mill.

Saturday, December 16th – She-Devil

Meryl Streep is wonderfully wacky as a glamorous novelist who steals unliberated Roseanne Barr's sleaze-bag husband. Roseanne gets satanic revenge of the most evil and outrageous kind. Port Washington and all Jitney stops east will never be the same.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER #131 PERFECT MAN SEEKS PERFECT WOMAN

Sitting in Primo Pizza with my son last Sunday, waiting for Dave to make my half cheese, half everything delicious pizza, I saw a copy of Dan's and flipped through it. In the back of the paper are the Personals. It occurred to me that everywhere in newspapers all across the country, everyday there are thousands of personal columns. Rows and rows of perfect people who can't find dates.

Ever notice how these columns all read the same? All the women list their age. They are all honest and sincere, non-smoking, no drugs, no STDs. They are all "very attractive," most are petite, and they always give hair and eye color. They always mention a special talent, like "good cook," or "great dancer."

These women all seek men, looks are never mentioned, but they must be honest and sincere, sensitive and understanding, non-smoking, drug free, disease free, non-addicted to anything, gainfully employed, single men who never lie or play mind games, who are intelligent, who are easy-going and have a great sense of humor (these men do exist, they are called 'gay'). And there's usually a tag about walking on the beach and watching sunsets, (like anyone's got time for that)... well, nothing unrealistic here...

The men all write the same ads too. I think it's a template they just stick a cute title on. They are all between thirty and fifty. They are all tall, very handsome, they are all physically and fiscally fit. They carefully avoid mentioning anything about their smoking, drinking status. They never list which "Anonymous" meeting(s) they attend. They never let a woman know in advance how much child and spousal support they pay. They never make any mention of what sports they must watch, whether or not they are capable of cleaning up after themselves, or exactly how much time they take in the bathroom to perform a simple bodily function that takes a woman less than thirty seconds.

These men all seek slim, very attractive women, who are younger than they are by a minimum of eight years. That's it. That's all they want. They could care less whether a woman drinks, smokes, sets the house on fire when she's mad, has served time for murder, none of those details matter. The question is, is she a woman who OTHER men want?

When men say they want height-weight proportionate, they mean slim, not actually height-weight proportionate: emaciated. Okay, but with big boobs, although they rarely mention that in the ad. But if they request a picture, cut to the chase and send one of your boobs... leave the other one in the bra. And they always end the ad with a lame plea to "take a chance."

Who'd want to take a chance with a man who's ego is big enough to advertise himself as tall, handsome, rich, completely and effortlessly desirable. A man like this doesn't need a woman, he needs a full length mirror.

I once read an ad by a man who, after the usual self adulations, and usual demands for a female whose perfection nearly (but not exactly) matches his own added, "someone without kids or an ex-husband to complicate my life." Oh, there's a great catch.. a man who doesn't want a woman who had the nerve to have a life before him...

And I can't say the women are much better. If a woman is pretty, petite, slim blonde with blue eyes she absolutely would NEVER need to put an ad in the personals.

When I read all these ads, I wonder why these perfect people can't find each other. There's a match for each of them in the other column. Maybe they're gorgeous but illiterate?

I'd love to see a realistic ad in the paper someday. Something like, "Marginally attractive 40-ish male. Hard working and honest. Has seen Blazing Saddles eight times. Drinks and smokes a little. Seeks great gal who just tells me what the hell she wants and when she wants it. Screw the height-weight crap. Must be good cook and think great sex is whenever I show up nekkid with beer. Must not ask to have anything moved, painted or discussed during football season."

Someday I'll send in a personal ad too, it will read, "Big pushy broad, auburn/green, 5'10" (5'12" in heels), seeks predominately sober, gainfully employed, goofy guy with boat. Send pic of boat."

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

Sometimes it seems we are at the crossroads of the world. I just got off the phone with a dear friend who was a longtime resident of the Hamptons. He is a photographer named Dan Budnik. He is known for many different works. He was published by Life magazine with photojournalism done at the time of Dr. and Mrs. Martin Luther King's walk to Selma Alabama. There are many striking photos of Georgia O'Keefe. Dan photographed Hamptons artists such as Bill deKooning. He did a book on the elders of the Hopi tribe. His work is powerful and loaded with spirit. He is headed out this way for a visit.

The call before Dan's call this morning was from a girlfriend who has been living in Germany. She and her partner have been working for the last six years on a center to train people in some techniques to help raise consciousness. There is good work being done in Europe and it feels like time to bring this work back here.

Last week I had a visit from a friend from France who has lived in Japan. He filled my head with haiku, tales of the Tea Ceremony and of a Zen monastery where he had lived. I mentioned that there are a lot of people who sit Zazen right here in Bridgehampton. We had dinner at Yama Q and we ran into a good friend of mine who has also lived in Japan. I'm referring to Gines Serran Pagan who has been in the news a lot recently. It was as if these two men were brothers in another life. It is amazing their paths have not crossed before. The conversation switched from English to Spanish to French to Japanese. The conversation went on for a few days. We also met up with the poet and painter, Siv Cedering. Unfortunately, her Dutch-born sculptor husband, Hans, was out of town. We included him in the ongoing conversation anyway.

We live in a time when it is not uncommon for people to go to Europe for a few days and still come out for the weekend in the Hamptons. We saw a friend just back from Paris. A call arrived from Dallas Ernst, also "just back."

I spoke to my gardener in Mexico this morning. A friend from San Diego is headed down the Baja this week and will stay in my little house overnight. I simply wanted to warn the gardener of his arrival. Once on the phone, it reminded me of my vegetable garden and the temptation to fly there for a few days just to plant my seeds so there will be lettuce and basil when I head back down in January. In speaking to my friends in far away places the distances seem short.

We live in an extraordinary time and an extraordinary place. I'm grateful to be a part of it.

amendment and a legal interpretation of the law to the effect that if you haven't taken delivery of your new car you have to cancel the order. There is also a move to prosecute Speaker Groscost for fraud.

Groscost first denied, and then admitted, that he has been buying and converting cars from companies run by a businessman friend of his named Nathan Learner. He also admitted he held secret talks with the EPA for four months and didn't tell anyone. State Senator Laura Knaberek has filed an ethics complaint against Mr. Groscost. In addition to buying and selling vehicles for personal profit, the complaint says, he also was too cozy with a prominent member of the natural gas industry lobby, Dennis Burke.

As a result of Mrs. Knaberek's ethics complaint, the head of the Ethics Committee, Senator Marilyn Jarrett, turned in her resignation. Turns out she is one of those who has applied to have the State pay for half the cost of a car. Six other State Senators followed her lead.

Where does it go from here?

"If we can get a moratorium, we can stop the bleeding at $800 million," the Governor said. "If we can get that legal interpretation, we can end the damage at $600 million."

Governor Hull also offered these comments.

"Frankly, nobody (in the legislature) was looking at the big picture when the bill was passed, and I take my share of the blame for signing it. But I am wondering what I am supposed to do now. The legislature passed 400 bills in the last five days of the current session. They are all on my desk. I guess I should veto every one of them."

MEN OF HONOR

Robert De Niro is too terrific an actor to worry about overexposure, but he seems to be playing everywhere. His new flick which had its New York premiere sponsored by Panerai sponsored event last week, is "Men of Honor" with fellow Oscar winner Cuba Gooding Jr. and hotter than hot Charlize Theron. In this film Gooding is asking "show me the water!"

"Hulaween" Bette Midler's Aloha Ball

Bette Midler's New York Restoration Project held its fourth annual benefit at the Manhattan Center in New York City. Rosie O'Donnell and a troupe of luscious Hawaiian singers danced the night away to help Bette's project to save the city's threatened Community Gardens. When Bette moved back to New York in 1994 she was dismayed by the condition of some of the City's most important public spaces. Bette proclaimed herself "The Queen of Trash," researched the problem and resolved to help fix it. The New York Restoration Project comes out of Midler's dream of a cleaner more beautiful New York. Fun in the Childcare Center Funhouse

The Bridgehampton Child Care & Recreation Center welcomed the community's children on Halloween. Our youth center was made into a "fun-house" and believe me it was full of surprises. C.M.E.E. (the Children's Museum of the East End) sent over decorations and cookies. Even the chill in the air couldn't cut down on the fun. There's also a Christmas party in the plans. Stay tuned. We'll announce it in the paper.

GEEKS OR KNIGHTS? YOU DECIDE

Twin Peaks Geeks is a somewhat misleading name for the computer fix-it company that describes itself as "all Mac, all the time." First, the "Twin Peaks" part has nothing to do with the David Lynch TV series. And second, the two proprietors – Mike Avery and Sheryl Heller – are not geeks. Or are they?

Q: As consultants specifically for the Macintosh computer, do you two find you are a welcome sight for Mac users who don't know where to turn in a Windows-dominated world? I know I couldn't believe my luck when I read your ad in Dan's proclaiming "Macintosh Problems? We Can Help."

A: Mike: We do find quite a few exasperated Mac users. Sheryl: I had a client call me from London on my cell phone while I was on the LIRR headed into Manhattan. He had been a client over the summer while vacationing on Shelter Island. He still needed my help after he got home. Mike: Sometimes clients have had a person come in and fix a problem but they don't want to call that person back. Many times it's because the person wasn't necessarily a Mac tech, so they are happy to have found a Mac-centric company to help them.

Q: I've seen Sheryl in action on the occasions she's corrected a problem or installed software for me. She's constantly on the run throughout the East End – driving with cell phone in hand (hey, she'll need a headset for that in Suffolk County soon) and fueling up with only a power bar and bottled water. What kind of life is it driving all the time and entering different clients' homes?

A: Sheryl: I do spend a lot of time on my cell phone fixing computers as I drive. Because we're based in Sound Beach, we try to stay overnight in the Hamptons at least one day a week to make things easier. But we like what we do so much that it takes away the pressure of the drive. But we are thinking of moving further east....Mike: When we get to clients' homes, we never know what's awaiting us – large dogs, ferrets, rats (yes, Sheryl found pet rats running around in one house), clients dressed in pajamas, or very, very old Macs that aren't worth as much as we are getting paid to fix them.

Q: Have you formed an opinion on what type of person buys a Mac?

A: Mike: The iMac – basically a Web-surfing, e-mail machine – has definitely broadened the appeal of the Mac. Before it appeared, most Mac owners were creative-industry types, researchers, or educators. And the Mac has traditionally been the computer of choice for desktop publishing and graphic design houses. Now we have clients who range from business people and lawyers to musicians, actors, editors, screenplay writers, teachers, and housewives.

Q: How did you two become Mac people?

A: Mike: When we were first getting into computers, we lived in San Francisco. One of our friends, an OG (original geek), was a big-time Mac fan. He steered us in that direction and we haven't ever looked back. The Mac's interface is much more user-friendly and elegant than most PCs. We know enough about PCs to do some troubleshooting but we have much more experience using the Mac. Don't get the impression that the Mac is trouble free – whether you own a Mac or IBM clone, things go wrong.

Q: How did it come about that you started fixing Macs for a living?

A: Sheryl: In the '90s in California, Mike and I were two friends who formed a gourmet food company together because we were unhappy with our day jobs (I worked in reservations at a hotel). We moved the company to the Internet in 1995. Since we had computers, we needed to fix them and we didn't have the money to hire consultants. So I would call our OG friend for advice. I learned quickly and soon was able to deal with the problems myself. Mike: And I learned things by watching and listening to her and to our friend. Sheryl: Then I started troubleshooting and teaching clients for a friend at a local Mac store. I found I liked this work, and when Mike and I eventually moved back to NY, I advertised my services here on the island. At first we had trouble finding Mac users and began to wonder if there were any on the island. After a while, we found that the North and South Forks have quite a few.

Q: You say you moved "back" to New York. Are you both originally from the East Coast?

A: Sheryl: I'm from Huntington. Mike: I'm from Montville, Connecticut. Sheryl and I met at a softball game in San Francisco, through mutual friends. I had just come back from Holland and needed a place to stay so I decided to share an apartment with Sheryl.

Q: Why did you choose "Twin Peaks" to be in your company name?

A: Mike: Twin Peaks was where we lived in San Francisco, at the top of Market Street. It didn't have anything to do with David Lynch but it didn't hurt that the TV series was popular then. When we had our gourmet food business (also called Twin Peaks), people would ask about coffee and cherry pie. We hadn't a clue as to why until we saw the Twin Peaks series in reruns on Bravo.

Q: What is the difference between the two of you regarding work styles?

A: Mike: Sheryl was the first to begin tutoring and troubleshooting on the Mac. Then I came on board as a tutor and now she does less teaching and more fixing. Sheryl: As a troubleshooter, one necessarily gravitates toward fixing things quickly and without explanation. Most people, if they try to pay attention to what I'm doing are lost quickly. So once you get used to working like this, trying to slow down and teach becomes more difficult. Mike: Of course, it's a necessity for me to understand minor technical stuff, but I prefer to teach. I am by nature more laid back. And patience is definitely needed to teach people how to use computers – or anything else.

Q: Sheryl once told me you and she have a roomful of computers at Twin Peaks Geeks – all connected to battery packs that go "beep-beep" when the electricity cuts off. How many do you have?

A: Mike: We have four Macs and one PC (for our accounting program). The battery packs allow us to continue working during LIPA's many roiling blackouts. We got the battery packs after an eight-hour blackout in San Francisco during which our computers crashed real hard.

Q: Do you use computers for recreation?

A: Mike: When we go online it's usually to find information on the latest Mac updates, upgrades, conflict resolutions, and the like. I do like to check out the various newspapers online, though. I have bookmarks for the San Jose Mercury News, The Economist, The Jerusalem Post, and the Chicago Tribune. It's nice to get different points of view. Sheryl: I like to go online to look at the gourmet food industry and to shop when I have spare time – which doesn't happen often. Mike: Mostly we use the computers for work but it's nice to use them to play games or visit the Guggenheim for a change of pace.

Q: What's the most embarrassing thing that happened when either of you was working with a client?

A: Sheryl: I'll take this question. When I first started, I went to a client's house and the first thing I did when I sat in front of her computer was empty her Trash. Unfortunately, that was where she was backing up all her files – someone had told her to do that. I was able to retrieve the "thrown out" files using Norton utilities, but needless to say, I don't empty anyone's Trash these days without inquiring first!

Q: The advertising world would have us believe that the newest computers allow any of us to get online quickly and easily. What's the actual truth?

A: Mike: The hype is so much more than the reality. Computers are not the next best thing since sliced bread. We are all pioneers in the use of personal computers. Twenty years from now people will look at the machines we use and laugh. In a perfect world, you'd take your new computer out of the box, plug in your power and modem, and off you'd go. There are some people who can do that. But not the people we meet. In a perfect world, our company would not need to exist. But fortunately for us, this is not the case.

Q: In your company literature, you say Twin Peaks Geeks takes pride in its ability to "translate from geek speak to plain English." Do you want to elaborate?

A: Mike: Geek speak is the over-your-head, I-know-more-than-you kind of talk you get from salespeople at most computer stores. It's the same as going to the auto mechanic and having him rattle off various car terms that if you are not a gearhead you probably don't have a clue as to what he is saying. Spouting off about megahertz, RAM, and a 10-gigabyte hard drive doesn't mean much to most people. Telling them that megahertz

Shop 'til You Drop ... With Maria Tennariello

Before we know it, it will be Thanksgiving. Family and friends gather to enjoy the holidays, and I will be expecting the entire family this year. I should start getting the house ready and decorated, so let's do some shopping!

Starting off in Bridgehampton on Snake Hollow Road, Marders is planning to expand their horizons and are making room for new merchandise. Look for a 60% off sale on Yellow Magnolia's (up to ten feet), Weeping Beech, River Birch, Japanese Flowering Dogwood (up to eight feet), Assorted Lilacs, Star Magnolia's, to name a few. Also on sale at 25% to 50% off are perennials, cement planters and statuary, pottery, tools and antiques. Bet you didn't know that Marders sold antiques.

At Simply French located on Jobs Lane in Southampton and Main Street in Bridgehampton is preparing for its first anniversary. You are all invited to join them on Saturday, November 11 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Jobs Lane location for some pre-holiday refreshments and to preview Simply French's holiday gift sets. They will have a little something French for everyone on your holiday gift list, wrapped and ready for giving or shipping. See you there!

Charos Custom Sound is doing a hot "Clearance Sale" that will save you lot's of do-re-mi! Receivers, CD players, speakers, woofers, phones, cellular accessories and AT&T phones are only part of this great sale. Get going for the holiday gifts, the early bird, well you know the rest. I am thinking about that flat screen TV, hey that's if I get that raise!

At Pier 1 Imports there is a "Holiday Sale" going on right now with lots of chenille throws ($39), chenille bears ($16), and velvet pillows (from $28 to $48). Also, save 20% to 40% off on all barstools and counter stools, save 30% on all candleholders and 20% on all holiday candles. This sale runs until November 26th.

Hot off the press, I found a website that is out of sight! If you love jewelry, clothing for both men and women, accessories and gifts for just everyone on your holiday shopping list. Sophiesboutique.com is the place to shop on the web. Hosted by Hamptons Online in Southampton, it's easy access and easy shopping. Go for it.

Have you been to Val's Closet yet? Val's Closet is conveniently located on Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays and is offering great designer clothing at incredible discount prices. Designers like DKNY, Laundry, Calvin Klein, Easel, Abs, BCBG and more are on sale! Get your holiday outfit ready to wear for all the great parties and family reunions.

Crazy Monkey (love this name), has great clothing, jewelry, bath, home and unique and affordable gifts for everyone. Located on Main Street in Amagansett, right next door to the One Stop Pet Shop, it's a store that should not be missed.

Ah, "Starfish Sweater Insanity Sale" is where you want to go for your holiday gift shopping. Just arrived, a new shipment of cashmere and cotton sweaters, hats, scarves and gloves. Look for those designer labels, gals, with up to 80% off. Located in the Amagansett Square and remember there is plenty of unlimited parking. Call Lorraine at 267-2455 for weekly updates.

That's it for this week. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

is kind of like the horsepower of a car engine, RAM is like the gas that runs the engine, and a 10 gigabyte hard drive is like a very large filing cabinet where you could put millions of letters or thousands of large digital pictures – these are analogies they can understand.

Q: You two are the heroes or knights in shining armor who appear at people's businesses or homes to enable them to use their Macs to browse the Internet, send e-mail, scan pictures, and use photo editing software, to name just a few functions. How does that make you feel?

A: Mike: We've noticed that our clients get quite a bit happier when their computer is up and running. That's what makes the whole experience very rewarding for us.

Q: Did you ever think you'd be computer geeks when you grew up?

A: Sheryl: I have an MBA in international finance.

Mike: And I went to school for television production. Both of these fields are far from what we're doing now. So, no, we never thought we'd be geeks. Sheryl: My father always thought I should be involved with computers. But who listens to their father when they think they know better?

WHEN in New York

The New York Botanical Garden in the Bronx is offering a cornucopia of events during the upcoming holiday season, November 24 through January 7.

Holiday Garden and Train Show November 24 - January 7. The magnificent Enid A. Haupt Conservatory hosts one of New York's most popular holiday traditions! In a miniature world of sylvan landscapes and historic Old Town New York, trains and trolleys wend their way across rustic bridges, disappearing into forest tunnels to reappear with a surprising flourish. Beautiful historic houses from New York's five boroughs pop up along the way, with a dazzling new reproduction of the New York City skyline including the Empire State Building, Chrysler Building, Flatiron Building, City Hall, Plaza Hotel, South Street Seaport, and Hell Gate Bridge. Artist Paul Busse of Applied Imagination creates this annual display with all natural materials.

Holiday Reflections at Conservatory Plaza November 24 - January 7. The entrance plaza to the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory is resplendent with lights and trimmings, featuring 80 spheres twinkling with white lights along the allee of honey locust trees. From the canopy of boughs above, visitors are bathed in a dazzling world of holiday light. At twilight, it's a magical, tranquil scene inviting joyful reflection away from the City's holiday hustle. With a festive tree trimmed by designer Philip Baloun and the glorious backdrop of the Conservatory itself lit up as a holiday jewel, Holiday Reflections is an enchanting scene.

Christopher Radko: Artistry and Holiday Charm November 24 - January 7. Christopher Radko's exquisite ornaments designed by the glass artisans of Europe adorn a stunning holiday tree in the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory's Aquatic Plants and Vines Gallery, where the shimmering pool creates a magical setting. Mr. Radko has created a glass ornament of the Conservatory itself to celebrate the Holiday Garden and Train Show (available at the Shop in the Garden).

City Bunnies' Winter Adventure November 24 - January 7. Whimsical topiary creatures ice skate, ski, fish, and frolic in humorous outdoor scenes at the Everett Children's Adventure Garden. These charming bunnies, created by artist Suprina Kenney, are set up for winter fun in the Garden's year-round, hands-on discovery museum with nature activities indoors and out. The City Bunnies visit their Grandma at Boulder Maze, string lights on a five-foot ladybug, ride bareback and ski on giant caterpillar topiaries, and even ice skate with their topiary frog buddies.

Tour the Rain Forest - Come in from the cold and discover the lush plants and warm feelings of the tropical rain forest, in the midst of a New York City winter. With illumination throughout the entire eleven glass-houses of the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, holiday visitors can enjoy exploration of A World of Plants right into the evening. Start your eco-tour with the rich, red poinsettias in the breathtaking Palms of the Americas Gallery. Stroll through tropical lowland and upland rain forests, and dramatic deserts of Africa and the Americas to add a sense of adventure and discovery to your holiday visit. Along the way, discover the lovely holiday tree of Christopher Radko decorated with his singular glass ornaments, including a replica of the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, in the Aquatic Plants and Vines Gallery.

Evergreen Trees and Rainbow Colored Leaves November 25 - December 31. Are evergreen trees always green? Bring the kids to press an evergreen plant, compare large and small cones of the world, and learn how to distinguish evergreen and deciduous trees in the Everett Children's Adventure Garden.

Holiday Craft Classes November 5 - December 31. The Garden's Continuing Education Department offers hands-on holiday craft courses. Create beautiful decorations in just one session and apply the techniques you learn to the rest of your holiday decorating. Make and bring home gifts, ornaments, wreaths, and centerpieces. (fee) Call (718) 817-8747 for information or a free catalog.

Holiday Tree Lighting and Sing-along December 3, 4:30 p.m. Share the holiday spirit with a sing-along of carols celebrating the lighting of the glorious 25-foot evergreen tree trimmed by Philip Baloun Designs at Conservatory Plaza. Presented in association with New York City Councilwoman June Eisland.

Bronx Arts Ensemble Holiday Family Concert December 3, 3 p.m. Fill your holidays with joy at this popular concert featuring the Highbridge Voices conducted by Bruno Casolari. The program includes Elijah's Angel, the award-winning fable of a joyous Christmas/Hanukkah celebration with music by Robert Kapilow, Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf and Good King Wenceslas composed by William Mayer. Call (718) 601-7399 (fee). After the concert, celebrate the annual Tree Lighting Ceremony at 4:30 p.m.

Get Up & Garden How-To Workshop: Holiday Plants, Trees, and Wreaths - December 9, 1-3 p.m. Enjoy this hands-on workshop with the Garden's experts and learn how to get the most out of your holiday plants and greenery! Free with Garden Passport admission.

Whispers from the Wild Storytelling in the Everett Children's Adventure Garden

Saturday and Sunday, December 9 and 10, 1pm - Holiday Fairy Tales by David Elyha

Saturday, December 16, 1 p.m. - Trees of the Season by Jonathan Kruk

Children's Tree Garden December 10 - Jan. 7. Schoolchildren of the Bronx decorate holiday trees with natural and recycled materials.

The Little Engine That Could - Holiday Puppet Theater - Dec. 9&10, 16&17, 23&24, 30&31, and Jan. 6&7 at 1, 2, and 3p.m. - New York's master puppeteer Ralph Lee presents his whimsical puppet theater creation of The Little Engine That Could, a popular, interactive holiday feature for children of all ages. (fee)

Community Holiday Open House December 15, 4-8 p.m. The Bronx community is invited to celebrate the holidays at the Garden with free admission after 4 p.m. to all events for the Holiday Garden and Train Show, plus special music, hot chocolate and cookies, and more.

Thomas the Tank Engine - December 23 - January 2. See Thomas the Tank Engine, the world's number one engine, while he visits The New York Botanical Garden. Bring a camera and take your children's pictures with Thomas. Event licensed by Gullane Entertainment.

Holiday Bird Count - December 30. Bring your binoculars and join a traditional (unofficial) outdoor holiday bird count at the Garden.

Whispers from the Wild Winter Woodlands Walk and Storytelling January 13 and 14, 1 p.m. The crisp winter air beckons! Bring the kids to explore the Garden's forty acre Forest in its dramatic winter beauty and enjoy storytelling with Jill Olesker.

The New York Botanical Garden at Bronx River Parkway (Exit 7W) and Fordham Road in the Bronx is open year-round. Holiday hours are Tuesday through Sunday and Monday holidays, 10am-6pm. The best way to enjoy the Garden is with the Garden Passport, a combination ticket which includes grounds admission, the Conservatory, Tram Tour, and Everett Children's Adventure Garden for $10 for adults; $7.50 for students and seniors; $4 for children 2-12. Separately, grounds admission is $3 for adults; $2 for seniors and students, $1 for children 2-12; under two, free. Grounds admission is free to everyone all day Wednesdays and on Saturdays from 10am to 12pm. Conservatory admission is $5 for adults; $4 for students and seniors, $3 for children 2-12. For information, call (718) 817-8700 or visit our Web site at www.nybg.org.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"THE KOREAN WAR" AT GUILD HALL

The current exhibit at Guild Hall, "The Korean War: Fifty Years Later" is an intriguing one, perhaps because it evokes more questions than it can possibly answer. For example, the East Hampton Star's critic commended the show's patriotic venture but questioned its aesthetics as appropriate for an art museum. While this is certainly a legitimate and fair issue to ponder, there's no doubt that combat art is certainly art. Some of it is glorious and museum quality while some is most likely amateurish. It depends on one's definition of "art." (So what else is new?)

There are more salient questions to consider, however: how well does the exhibit record/document the war as an event; how realistic are the experiences reflected of those who fought the war; how fair or unfair are the political/social comments that are made (if any)?

Here the answers depend on one's definition of combat art.

For this critic, the primary question is a different matter: Why is it that the war exhibit does not move most viewers as it should, considering the subject matter and themes. (The contemporary works by Korean artists will fare much better and will no doubt be deemed more "significant" and aesthetically viable.)

One reason why veterans may have trouble with the exhibit is that it does not depict the war's extreme bloodiness as they remember it, although no combatant particularly wants to be reminded of this aspect. Conversely, the cold weather and resulting physical hardships are represented time and time again, a thing? Do we crave to see torture and pain? (Admittedly, we're exaggerating to make a point, suggesting why many spectators were left cold.)

Even so, there are very moving portraits of pain, particularly Margaret Bourke-White's photographs (for example, "Mother and Son Reunited"), her expertise being much better represented here than in her current exhibit at another gallery.

And who can deny the power of a small treasure by Picasso, "Massacre in Korea-1951," which depicts the enemy as both futuristic robots and primitive natives who shoot pregnant women. Its anti-war theme, like "Guernica's" message, is potent as well, suggesting that conflict exists in all cultures at all times.

While Picasso's work is somewhat melodramatic (like Sam Fuller's anti-communist movie, Steel Helmet, which exploits the relationship between a tough American soldier and a Korean boy), curator Simon Taylor has chosen the subtle over the sensational. He has wisely left the less subtle and more subjective points-of-view to the contemporary art works where dramatic presentation evokes an emotional response.

Pablo Picasso, "Massacre in Korea," 1951 powerful experience that soldiers also surely recall.

Viewers not involved in the Korean conflict may perceive the art as meek and "objective," too. Have we been so exposed to graphic war violence through the media that we think this exhibit is lacking some-temporary art works where dramatic presentation evokes an emotional response.

The exhibit is on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until Jan. 7, 2001

HONORING THE ARTIST: SHAREN DYKEMAN

It's taken artist Sharen Dykeman a long time to arrive at the point where she is right now. That "point" can be measured in any number of ways, but like mathematical points, all lines have finally converged.

Such a convergence wasn't always something Ms. Dykeman took for granted, given that her life has taken so many twists and turns. True, attending Syracuse University seemed easy enough for someone who had grown up near New York's Finger Lakes; majoring in acting also appeared like an appropriate direction to take. But Ms. Dykeman didn't follow the easy path. She decided to leave school and also give up a chance to study acting in London on a scholarship.

Ms. Dykeman tried another direction instead, going off to New York and becoming a production assistant for a new experimental television show called Camera Three. "This was in the early 1960s, mind you," she explains. "I started as a secretary and then became a production assistant. It was live television, and we had all kinds of avant-garde artists on, like Stan Vanderbeek and Merce Cunningham. I was with the show until 1969. Unfortunately, I wanted to be an assistant director, but there weren't opportunities for women so I went to PBS as an assistant director and then as a director for a talk show. I resigned in 1970."

Life took another turn for Ms. Dykeman. She moved to Greenport where she lived in a cottage overlooking the water and opened up a bookstore when she couldn't find a book she was looking for. "Life changed for me then," Ms. Dykeman recalls. "My life turned around.

I started painting even though I had never had an art lesson. I had my first one-woman show. After eleven years, I sold the bookstore."

It was 1980: another direction, another place as Ms. Dykeman relocated to Los Angeles, immersing herself in a completely different lifestyle. "I became an Associate Producer of TV's Dynasty for four years," she notes, "thinking I just wanted to make enough money to come back to Long Island."

"But then I went on to work for two years on The Colbys which starred Charlton Heston. I still remember that the show was to debut on the same night that Ronald Reagan was to give his Inaugural Speech as President, and Chuck called him up to ask how long the speech was going to be. 'I'll make it short, Chuck,' the President said, 'so it won't interfere with the show's debut.'"

Ms. Dykeman laughs at recalling the incident.

Ms. Dykeman is once again back in the area, this time living in East Hampton. She's painting full-time now, preferring to capture scenes like Dune Road's old boathouse that appears on this week's cover. "There's a lonely, shabby eloquence to the boathouse," she says simply, explaining her reason for painting it.

Simplicity seems to characterize Ms. Dykeman's life at the moment, a kind of serenity that comes with finally arriving at a place where there are no more twists and turns in the road.

Come in to see our newest books and toys.

We are having a mostly warm and gloriously colorful fall here. As evening temperatures drop, our cultural centers light up with good community theater, music and special programs. This week there are two award-winning plays and a charming musical on South Fork stages, a Dan's Papers free screening of the thriller Love Walked In, a Korean War film and curator Simon Taylor speaking at Guild Hall. There's a Veteran's Day parade Saturday morning down Southampton's Main Street. Steve Forbert sings at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday evening and the U.S. Air Force's jazz ensemble plays at Southampton High School on Sunday afternoon.

Other interesting events this week: Saturday evening's historical walking tour by lantern in East Hampton; Group for the South Fork's moonlight nature walk Saturday evening in Hampton Bays; and Indira Ganesan speaking about "Growing Up Biculturally in America" on Monday evening in Southampton. For details on these events and others, read on:

THEATER

Big Band East joins Southampton College's Southampton Players in a new production of Cole Porter's musical comedy Anything Goes. The story is set in the 1930s aboard the S.S. America. The show opens on Thursday evening, November 9, and plays this weekend and next. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday plus a special Veterans Day performance on Sunday at 3 p.m., all in the college's Avram Theater (Fine Arts building). For tickets ($12 adults, $8 seniors and students) call the box office at (631) 287-8480.

The Peconic Theatre Company presents Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer Prize-winning play Driving Miss Daisy this weekend and next at the Southampton Cultural Center. Veteran theater and television actress Peg Murray has the title role, with Al Jones as Miss Daisy's chauffeur Hoke Coleburn and David Lamberton as her son Boolie. Performances are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday matinee at 2 p.m. Tickets are $18 for adults, $15 for seniors and students; call (631) 287-4377 for reservations.

Take Five 2000 with Jan Silver

This is the last weekend to see the Hampton Theater Company's production of A.R. Gurney's award-winning play The Dining Room at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. The play is about the demise of an American WASP family. Tickets ($20 adults, $16 seniors and students) can be reserved by calling to box office at (631) 288-1500.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre is offering two acting classes this Saturday. An improv workshop taught by William Burford is from 1 to 4 p.m. and a seminar on auditioning, conducted by Emma Walton and Stephen Hamilton, runs from 4 to 7 p.m. at the theater. For information call (631) 725-0818.

MUSIC

The Airmen of Note, the U.S. Air Force's big band jazz ensemble, will perform at Southampton High School on Sunday at 3 p.m. as part of the Veteran's Day celebration. A favorite singer/songwriter of the fortysomething generation, Steve Forbert, will be at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday at 8 p.m. (for $25-$30 tickets, call 631-267-3117).

Check Dan's Papers "Day-by-Day" calendar and "Hamptons Nightlife" column to catch my favorite performers at local clubs: The Lone Sharks (good rock band, usually at Bridgehampton's Wild Rose Café); Dennis Raffelock Trio (soft jazz and pop standards, usually at Bridgehampton's Bridges); Kipling Trio (jazz and pop standards at Bridgehampton's Kipling's on Friday); Cardinali/Gene/Salter trio at Montauk's Oyster Pond on Friday and Bridgehampton's World Pie for Sunday brunch; Hunky Page on piano weekends at Sag Harbor's American Hotel; Julie Shelton's jazz singing at Dave's Grill, Montauk; Andy "Crazyfingers" Boracci at East Hampton's Mary Jane's on weekends plus Diana Rogers playing pop standards and showtunes at East Hampton's Maidstone Arms late Sunday afternoon.

SPEAKERS

Author Eesha Williams will read from her new book, Grassroots Journalism, at Canio's Books in Sag Harbor at 6 p.m. on Saturday, November 11.

Guild Hall's curator Simon Taylor will talk about the current exhibit, "Korea: A Forgotten War," on Sunday at 4 p.m. Next Sunday at 2:30 p.m., popular author and Korean vet James Brady will speak at Guild Hall. The talk is in conjunction with the current exhibition of art and artifacts. There is no admission charge.

FILM

Guild Hall's feature film series on the Korean War continues this Thursday, November 9, with Prisoner of War. Next week's film is The Manchurian Candidate. Both films start at 7:30 p.m. in the John Drew Theater. Free admission.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" series continues this Saturday, 3 p.m., at the Ross School, East Hampton, with the neo-noir thriller Love Walked In starring Denis Leary, Terence Stamp and Aitana Sanchez-Gijon. There is no admission charge but a reservation is necessary; call 631-537-0500 ext. 225.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Southampton holds a Veterans Day Parade starting at the Presbyterian Church on Saturday at 9:45 a.m. The route ends at Veterans' Memorial Hall opposite Agawam Park on Pond Lane where there will be a brief service.

The East Hampton Historical Society has a lantern tour of historic sites on Saturday at 7 p.m. It departs from Clinton Academy opposite Guild Hall on Main St.

The Group for the South Fork has a moonlight nature walk in Hampton Bays on Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m. Call them at (631) 537-1400 for details.

Wolfer Estate (formerly Sag Pond Vineyards) in Sagaponack as a winemaking demonstration on Sunday at noon, 2 and 4 p.m. (no admission charge).

HOLLYWOOD

in The Hamptons

THE LINDA BLAIR TWITCH PROJECT

Since Linda Blair's underage, pudgy face took a few bad turns in 1973's The Exorcist, Little Women in movies haven't been the same. Her 12 year-old, very rude, explicit behavior (which implied nothing and showed everything in bold relief, up there on the big screen) managed to turn a lot of heads and scare-up enough box office money to reproduce scores of horrors in the same bloody vein and a couple of sequels . . . one co-starring Richard Burton!! and I'll Miss Blair. Graphic devilry of pre-adolescent, nymphet innocence-turned-obscene seemed a reflection of the 70's revolt of the good little girl next door who, armed with "flower" power, defied regimentation. The huge movie population was, I think, more shocked by what "little girls" were capable of than the savagery of the visual audacity which was, after all, makeup and special effects and still crude at that.

THE WICKED YOUNG WITCH IS BACK

Now, who should show up in Blair Witch 2? None other than the demon of the first Blair Witch . . . The Witch herself, Little Nellie, the child who was presumably responsible for the weird disappearance of the first shaky, young campers in the bleak forest outside Burkittsville, Maryland. She was never seen in the original fright-night feature because nothing was seen. That was its strength. You were scared by the "dark" . . . actually the great sense of "night" that the movie captured. In the current sequel, Book of Shadows, little Nell's first on-screen appearance chilled me, and like that, Blair Witch 2 eventually shows everything on the screen . . . not just little piles of sticks and stones. However it is not simply a knee-jerk twitch of other suspense-horror flicks. It tries hard to explain its mysteries in an obsessed-with-Pop-Culture way and therefore leaves many more questions to unravel. Figure that out! And you have documentarian, Joe Berlinger's first fiction movie package that the executive producers hope will have millions online, surfing for chats and website insights into the well-wrapped bundle of paranoia to regenerate the interest and cash of Little Nell's and Linda's wickedness.

STICK AND STONES MAY BREAK MY BONES BUT...

For the many, many fans of Blair Witch 1 who insist that it was all true, early scripts for Witch 2 had groups going out looking for the vanished trio who left behind their damning film and tape footage. Wisely, Berlinger's story has four thrill-seekers going to the location of the so-called terror for their own kicks of fantasy. They buy a tour from an enterprising local who also sells loads of Witch souvenirs in a shop and online. He leads them on a safari-like expedition . . . armed with loaded video cameras to capture mystical adventures and/or proof they spent a night at that hysterical/historical place. At the site, a competitive group tries to oust them but, the wily tour guide sends them away in search of a made-up attraction. When the "dreaded" darkness comes, the camp site group creates their own reality with a good old 1970's, weed and alcohol, wild love-in. Morning finds them wrecked! And so is all the equipment and written notes. The taped footage was mysteriously buried but it is retrieved with psychic help. Most disastrously missing, is any knowledge or memory of what happened that night. Thus begins the torturous onset of plague-like attacks, both real and imagined, pictured graphically but in quick cuts, like a lot of the bloodiness.

SMILE, YOU'RE ON CREEPY CAMERAS

The director tries to keep the supernatural mayhem surfacely attractive and intelligent. His clue dropped early on is, "Film lies. Video tells the truth." Pretensions like this blaze, as in the camp site fire that flares wildly with hallucinations... orgiastic nudity and butchering along with reality and spontaneously combusted imagination. The thrill-seekers have gotten more than they paid for. They have lost, in that dark night, five hours. As they grope for it, the warm squishy stuff they come across is less repulsive than you might or might not want and you might not be able to brush it off that easily. For a while, it sticks in your mind like droppings caught between your shoe's heel and soul. Don't expect your inner soul to be sullied. However, the surprise ending carries significance if you care to think about it. I did. No one else seems to have... yet.

Dan's Papers

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

3 PM Saturday, November 11th at the Ross School Library

19 Goodfriend Drive (off Route 114), East Hampton
WESTHAMPTON IS THE SETTING AND BACKDROP FOR SEDUCTION, SEX AND SUSPENSE . . . NATURALLY! WHAT ELSE?

The gritty beaches, shiny white restaurants, clammy lounges, relaxed houses and summery streets of Westhampton stand in for a Florida-like place of wheedling intrigue in Dan's Papers' FREE Film Festival screening this Saturday. Love Walked In stars Denis Leary, Terence Stamp and last but not most, Aitana Sanchez-Gijon, heating up the film's Latino, hot-cha-cha flavor. From the novel by Jose Pablo Feinman and directed by Juan C. Campanella, conspiratorial blackmail broils with have and have not motivations, backed up by a piano player and his sexy singer girlfriend's lounge act. Ms. Sanchez-Gijon is Vicki Perez, the insinuating singer and Denis Leary is Jack, a good piano man and composer and novelist, they have good sex and therefore, a good thing . . . at least, as far as Jack is concerned. But he wants more. The book he's writing preoccupies his thoughts and his introductory talks, before playing, are annoying the customers and his boss. However, one listener likes it a lot. This is Terence Stamp, as handsome as ever, and looking like the monied, important person he is. His name is Fred Moore, and he's buying up properties right and left and so, Jack's boss thinks he's right and Jack is left with his and Vicki's job intact and both also realize Moore's worth. Their minds start clicking as does their friendship with Moore.

Love Walked In

When Jack is tickling the typewriter, during the day, the troubling theme is Good and Evil, represented by young friends. Howard is naively Good and Matt is terribly Evil. As Jack imagines them, they occupy the screen in jarring episodes. When Jack tickles the piano, at night, he narrates the events of his real life. . . his gnawing position as a have not wanting to have. His voice-over narration is in the Raymond Chandler, Private Eye style. Sure enough, a Private Eye shows up. He is Eddie, from Jack's youth on Moshula Parkway. Eddie is played by Michael Balducci, in his good-old-fat guy/nice guy style so, you know he's none too successful, either. But, he has a job. Moore's wife wants proof of his infidelity. She wants to dump him. It turns out that she has the money and Fred Moore was one of the have-nots. Jack's mind goes, Click! Click! He will get Vicki to have sex (which she is so good at) with Fred Moore (who is so attractive, anyway). Then Click! Click! go the cameras and , Clink! Clink! go the coins into the savings bank. It's a three way blackmail scheme as sleek as Terence Stamp's elegant, flowing white mane of hair but, as fraught with the equally silky precariousness of Moore's personality and Vicki's conduct.

Jack is too complicated for his own good . . . or evil. There's his novel that keeps interrupting his consciousness. There is his boss's enforcer. They're friends. There's his old friend, Eddie, the not-so-Private Eye and especially, there's his girlfriend and musical partner, Vicki. Jack is as unsure of them as he is of himself. Howard and Matt are fictional but their violence turns real. Who else will turn . . . on him?

Love Walked In is springy with entrapment like an overwound old watch and you will be another victim. Watch out! The film's heat will very likely steam up the sumptuous Ross School's Screening Room, making it difficult to spot Dan Rattiner and Cathy Squires of Dan's Papers fame as extras in a scene at Docker's Restaurant.

Before 3 pm, we'll run a short video by Kendra Stanchfield, a Ross School student. It's a comment on Technology and Spirituality. After the movie there will be snacks.

And hey! This is all FREE.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

The sunny autumn days on the East End, in recent weeks, have virtually painted the landscape a beautiful orange color. Largely due, of course, to the stunning carpet of pumpkins and the cornucopia of winter squash at farm stands and pumpkin fields along our highways.

Some of the more familiar varieties of hard-shelled squashes we know as winter squash consist of acorn, butternut and Hubbard. Yet numerous varieties abound such as delicata, vegetable spaghetti, buttercup, kabocha and sweet dumpling, yielding a plethora of rich tasting squashes.

The small, lightly ridged delicata, similar to the upright sweet dumpling in that they both possess a mottled and striped ivory skin, can be tender enough to eat when properly cooked. The flesh of spaghetti squash, oval shaped with a hard yellow shell, is mild tasting and needs to be seasoned well. When baked and scraped with a fork, you will pull out what appears to be miles of golden strands. Dress with tomato sauce and cheese for a savory vegetarian spaghetti or sauté the strands in a skillet with olive oil, lots of garlic and dry oregano, Greek style, as I recently cooked it (with thanks to Southampton resident Gloria Reilly, a friend of Greek ancestry.) The squat and round buttercup squash, like the Japanese kabocha, cook best when steamed and mashed or pureed.

The attractive striped turban squash, visible at the market place, is not considered good-eating, just good looking. Use a high and handsome one in combination with gourds for a colorful holiday centerpiece. I don't think you need to be reminded that Thanksgiving is moments away.

MAPLE-NUT BUTTERCUP SQUASH PUREE

The dense flesh of butternut squash lends itself to the technique of steaming with custard smooth results.

3-4 cups puree

3 pounds butternut squash
1/4 cup butter, at room temperature
2/3 cup pure maple syrup
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 teaspoon fresh ground ginger
1/3 cup chopped toasted walnuts or pecans

1. Place the whole squash in a steamer rack. Cover and steam until squash is soft when pierced with a knife near the stem end, about 30 minutes. Alternatively, halve the squash, scoop out seeds and fiber and set cut side down to steam for about 15-18 minutes or until very tender.

2. Remove from heat. When cool enough to handle scoop flesh and drain in a colander. Transfer to a saucepan and mash as you would potatoes. Beat in the butter, maple syrup, salt, pepper and ginger and stir to mix.

Transfer to a warm serving dish, sprinkle with nuts and serve hot.

ELIZABETH SCHNEIDER'S BAKED DELICATA SQUASH HALVES WITH CREAM AND BASIL

*Elizabeth Schneider is the author of the classic Uncommon Fruits & Vegetables, A Commonsense Guide - Harper & Row.
2 servings*

1 delicata squash, about one pound, rinsed
Salt and sugar to taste
2 pinches dried basil, crumbled
2 tablespoons heavy (or whipping) cream

1. Cut or knock off squash stem. Hold squash upright on this relatively flat end and very carefully slice down with a heavy knife to make two long halves. With melon-ball cutter scoop out all seeds and fibers. Shave a thin sliver from each curved underside so halves do not tip.

2. Sprinkle interior of squash with salt, sugar, and a big pinch of basil. Place a tablespoon of cream in each. Crimp foil to cover each half and set in a baking pan.

3. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven about 40-50 minutes until very tender. Remove foil: Carefully spoon up a little cream to moisten cut rim. Return to oven and bake, uncovered, for 5 minutes, or until lightly browned and bubbling.

SPAGHETTI SQUASH WITH OLIVE OIL, GARLIC AND OREGANO

*Hard-shelled squash can take up to an hour to bake. Although I am not a fan of microwave cooking I find it works well for cooking hard-shell squashes and cuts down on cooking time considerably.
Serves 4*

1 spaghetti squash, about two pounds
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. With a sharp heavy knife cut squash in half lengthwise. With melon-ball cutter scoop out all seeds and fibers. Place cut-side down in a Pyrex or microwave safe dish and time-cook for 6 minutes. Turn over and cook 4 minutes more. Return to cut-side down and cook 2-3 minutes longer until flesh is tender. Alternately prick whole squash in several places with a sharp knife and bake in a 375-degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour or boil whole for about 30 minutes. Drain and halve at once to stop further cooking.

2. Drag a fork through the flesh and pull the strands apart until only the thin skin remains. Can be done ahead to this point.

3. Warm oil in a skillet and when hot add vegetable spaghetti with the garlic and oregano and toss to mix for several minutes to cook the garlic and warm the mixture. Season with salt and pepper and serve hot.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

As I mentioned in last week's column, I traveled to Saratoga to attend the New York State Association of Conservation Districts Annual Meeting. The event was held at the Gideon Putnum Hotel located at the Saratoga State Park. It is an historic brick building right in the middle of a magnificent pine forest, in close proximity to the fabulous Saratoga State Park golf course. Too bad I didn't have time to play. It was too cold anyhow as we encountered snow on the way up. Deputy County Executive George Proios, who chairs the Suffolk County Soil & Water Conservation District, as well as Tom McMahon, District Manager and Allan Connell of USDA, NRCS also attended the meeting with me.

The purpose of the State Association's annual meeting, like most annual meetings, is to report to the 58 county members what transpired during the year, our accomplishments and our shortcomings, election of officers, discuss policy issues for the next legislative session, and of course, networking. This year the attendance was the largest for our association in many years. At the awards banquet, the association presented a number of awards to individuals and county districts whose programs are cutting edge and achieve quantitative environmental benefits. This year we recognized New York

State Assemblyman Bill Magee (Ag committee chair) for his leadership in passing the AEM - Agricultural Environment Management Bill and liability indemnification for districts. These were organizational priorities for NYACD. New York State Senator Nancy Larraine Hoffmann also received the award but could not attend the meeting. New York Agriculture Commissioner Nathan Rudgers gave an outstanding dinner speech about the challenges or "opportunities" that face agriculture in New York, and the affects upon the environment and economy. Nathan also promoted the growing importance of farmland preservation as an alternative to suburban sprawl development. Last year the department received requests for over fifty million dollars for farmland preservation statewide. Hudson Valley, and urban areas such as Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse are experiencing what we have been for the last thirty years. We (Long Island) have been warning our friends upstate that suburbia was coming their way - it has arrived. Anyhow, Nathan's comments were right on the mark. After dinner I was blown away and totally shocked to receive the "Distinguished Service to Districts" award for my role in working with the legislature for the passage of our priority bills. It was a pleasant yet unexpected surprise. All of the County District Directors are volunteers, we don't do this for awards. We do it because it's an opportunity to give back to our communities and it's also very rewarding to help farmers and the environment alike. Enough about SWCDs.

By the time you read this column, election day will be over and we will know who our next President, Senator, and Congressman or woman will be. Thank God! I have had all of the negative campaign ads, finger pointing and character assassination I can stand for one year. It's a pathetic display of the dark side of humanity. Both sides of the aisle should be ashamed of themselves for subjecting our citizens to their nonsense. It's no wonder why the public is apathetic and cannot stand politics. Why can't politicians take the high road and talk about what is important to the people? Healthcare benefits and costs, education, environment, taxes and issues that affect our lives as a society are what we care about. I guess it's easy to be critical from the outside, but I personally could not engage in such tactics. Let's hope our newly elected officials put aside the politics and get busy on the people's business. Stay turned.

Joseph M. Gergela III is executive director of Long Island Farm Bureau.

Winterizing Techniques For The Irrigation System

A major consideration of any maintenance program is preparing the system for winter. A poor program will jeopardize the longevity of the irrigation system. Proper winterizing starts with understanding the complete workings of your system and especially how it is designed.

The objective of "winterizing" is the removal of the majority of water from the main line and lateral pipe. Make sure the night temperatures are monitored. On Long Island winterizing by Thanksgiving weekend is as late as you should go. Water left in pipes, valves, fittings and sprinklers may expand and cause severe damage.

Removing the water can be accomplished by one or more methods: gravity drain, air pressure blowout, and sump pumping.

Gravity drainage has worked well for many years on most types of systems. This method works very well with manual quick-couple systems. Automatic systems, on the other hand, have many areas where water can be trapped and may not be easily drained by gravity flow.

Consult with professional maintenance people for your specific situation. In both manual and automatic systems where the piping has little or no elevation change, it becomes necessary to remove water from lines by "blowing" it out with compressed air.

Sump pump drainage method: This method is used in areas with poor drainage or where the water table is above the piping system.

Controllers and pumping Systems also require special attention for winterization. Consult the manufacturer or your local professional!

Holiday Smile Advice From The Tooth Fairy

How to keep your "Holiday Smile" white and healthy.

Tooth whitening is on all the toothpaste shelves, on your television and on your mind. What is the real secret of keeping your teeth healthy and white for the holidays?

A healthy smile should show a good "Smile Line". What is a smile line? Look at your teeth in the mirror and note the gum-line meeting your teeth. If some teeth show a higher smile line than others, this is because of gum recession. Gum recession is due to the gum tissue pulling away from the tooth. It is important to keep the gum tissue healthy and keep it from shrinking because you do not want the gum line to recede.

Gum tissue is usually described as pink, pale pink or coral pink. This is not true in all cases, depending on the melanin pigmentation. Healthy gums can be described as salmon-coral-colored and are commonly more pigmented in Blacks. It is important to note the healthy color of your own gum tissue.

Another cause of gum recession is lack of blood flow into the area of the gum tissue; a very common cause of gum-disease. The lack of blood flow into the area of the gum-tissue will cause the gum-tissue to pull away from the tooth. This will leave you with the appearance of a tooth that appears longer. Have you ever heard of the expression "Long in the Tooth"? This is the resulting problem of gum recession.

If you are a tooth grinder then you may also be a candidate for gum recession and as a result have the appearance of "Long in the Tooth." The constant grinding away at the teeth may result in weakened attachment for the teeth and the gum tissue will then become loose and pull away from the tooth.

Another possibility for gum recession is poor tooth brushing habits and aggression released during brushing your teeth. Yes, many of us, especially around "Holiday" time, can create an ugly smile due to stress.

With all the tooth whitening products and home care products available we should have the brightest smiles in the world. What is preventing us from having a happy and healthy "Holiday Smile"? The brightest smile is a smile with intelligence. You must keep the gums healthy. By using the over-the-counter bleach and not caring for the gums you will end up with a whiter "Long in the Tooth" appearance. The peroxide that is used to whiten your teeth may cause the gum to shrink and enlarge the tooth appearance. Make sure that your gum tissue is in optimum health.

How can you keep your gums from shrinking? Use of baking soda or natural toothpaste is important. Echinacea or Calendula toothpaste is helpful in re-building the gum tissue. I would certainly choose to swallow a natural product that feeds and nurtures cells then swallow a toothpaste that is composed of chemicals. Echinacea builds the gum tissue and calendula acts as an anti-inflammatory. Baking soda can regulate the acids in your mouth: Acids in your mouth can destroy your teeth and eat away the bone that supports and holds your teeth in place.

Tooth brushing is as important as the products you use. The teeth are composed of enamel (a hard surface) and the gum tissue is made up of soft tissue (cells). Think of the confusion of tooth brushing. We are told to brush our teeth at a 30° angle, make little circles, etc., etc. Misleading information can create a negative effect on our gums. We must remember that we are working with two tooth surfaces. Hard enamel (tooth) and soft tissue (gums). Massage of the gums is very important. If you think of the word massage and shimmy the brush (soft) back and forth then you will bring blood flow into the area of the tissue and create new cells into the area. This will prevent recession and a "Long in the Tooth" appearance.

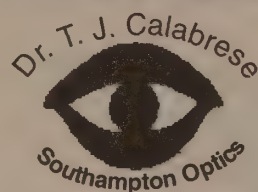

The root is not covered with enamel and if it is exposed then the yellowing appearance of the root will not become whiter. The whiter tooth now sitting next to the exposed root will then be an ugly sight. Working the health of your teeth with a whiter smile in the long run lead you to a brighter more intelligent smile.

*A Happy Holiday smile is both whiter and healthier.

Laser-Assisted Hair Removal: A New And Better Treatment

Unwanted hair has bothered people for hundreds of years.

Plucking, shaving, and waxing only work temporarily. Electrolysis can be time consuming and uncomfortable as it deals with this problem only one hair at a time.

Fortunately lasers can now eliminate unwanted facial and body hair in both men and women. This method is a safe, fast and affordable procedure which is FDA approved for PERMANENT hair reduction.

Lasers eradicate unwanted hair by targeting the melanin in the hair follicle. A small handpiece is placed near the skin and the laser pulses are absorbed by the pigment in the hair follicle for a fraction of a second. A focused beam of light destroys the hair and disables the follicle but the surrounding skin is not damaged.

Any area of the body can be treated. Popular sites include the upper lip, bikini area, underarms, chest, back and legs. Laser 4 hair removal treatment is ideally performed in a medical office under the supervision of a physician who understands your health history as hair growth can be related to other medical issues.

Laser hair removal is now a more convenient alternative to older methods and a more permanent way to get rid of unwanted hair and achieve the smooth skin we all want.

If you would like more information about laser hair removal call the office of Alexander J Covey M.D. 445 Main Street, Center Moriches, N.Y. Telephone (631) 578-1043 or visit us at www.lasersmoothskin.com

Acupuncture : Science, Art or Both?

It is apparent from archeological evidence that acupuncture has been practiced for at least 5,000 years. Over this extraordinary length of time, the practice of acupuncture has been through a great many changes. During the first 2,000 years, it is probable that it was relatively unsophisticated. By approximately 200 B.C., however, Chinese physicians were referring to 'earlier classics' and had already developed the fundamental principles of Chinese medicine that have remained basically unchanged to this day.

Hopefully, the future of acupuncture in the West will be one of growth and acceptance as more people have the opportunity to judge its benefits for themselves. The strengths of Chinese medicine complement the weaknesses of Western medicine so well that it is probable that patients, who previously may not have considered alternatives, will increasingly seek the advice of practitioners of both systems in their efforts to find effective therapies.

Dr. Robert Abramson, M.D., who practices acupuncture in Wainscott at the Sage Hampton Spa, began his professional career as a dentist and began administering acupuncture to his patients while still a dentist. Profoundly influenced by Professor J.R. Worsley of the U.K., Dr. Abramson went back to medical school, graduating in the mid 80s, and currently practices acupuncture as part of his medical practice in both Wainscott and N.Y.C. "Western medicine focuses on a 'cause and effect' kind of treatment. It is Western medicine's premise that something from the outside world has attacked a person and the therapy used to treat the resulting illness is to kill it off or cut it out.

Chinese medicine believes that germs are ubiquitous and the answer to maintaining health is to strengthen the individual so that they can defend themselves against illness and disease," said Dr. Abramson. He feels that Western medicine focuses on acute illness while Chinese medicine focuses on chronic illness. "Acupuncture recognizes that each of us is indivisible, an integrated whole: body, mind and spirit. Western medicine is beginning to recognize this fact and treat patients accordingly." Dr. Abramson may be contacted at his office at 324-9492.

POLICE BLOTTER

The adventures of the Dan's Papers scarecrow, designed by Barbara Maitan, have proceeded on a more ominous note. Sometime during Halloween night, the scarecrow was kidnapped and discovered the next day outside a church in Bridehampton. The scarecrow had been cruelly jammed on the pickets of a fence – and furthermore, had been decapitated, said head also pinioned on a picket. Although no suspects have, as of presstime, been fingered, the county's forensic's lab is currently running DNA tests.

A recent sting operation for prostitution in the Riverside section of Flanders netted not only some ladies of the evening but four "johns," one of whom came from as far away as Pennsylvania, a distance indeed to travel to enjoy the seedy pleasures of the aforementioned locale.

Speaking of inanimate kidnappings: Three tackling dummies at the East Hampton High School have been purloined. They are worth about $200 apiece. The school district's athletic director says the dummies were stolen between October 19 and October 26 – a period during which the dummies apparently had no duties to fulfill.

More cannibis afoot in the Hamptons. Tarpaper-covered wooden boxes with 'mary jane' drying upon them were discovered in Northwest woods. There was also a large bundle of weed discovered. Police have no idea who left the herb about.

Bring me the head of Frosty the Snowman, says Richard Sawyer of Noyac Road. Mr. Sawycr was returning from a Halloween gathering and sometime during the journey lost his head – the head of his custom-made (to the tune of onè grand) Frosty the Snowman costume, that is. Frosty's head is big and round and white – with, of course, a carrot for a nose. (No corncob pipe?). Mr. Sawyer, who runs Treely Yours, is offering a winter's worth of free firewood for whoever returns Frosty's head – which may be found anywhere from Hill Street in Southampton, Montauk Highway through Water Mill, then Scuttlehole Road to Noyac Road. Mr. Sawyer may be reached at 725-3118.

Mike Tyson isn't the only one attackinng earlobes. One David J. Ricereto of Southampton, was charged, in the process of violating an order of protection, of grabbing a woman by the neck and head area and causing a tear in her earlobe.

If you're going to fake a check do it in a big way, was apparently the philosophy of Carlos Albert Cardonna of North Sea, who sent a check, via Federal Express, for $412,105 to the Suffolk County National Bank in Southampton. In a note enclosed with the check he asked that the majority of the money be wired to an account in Saudi Arabia and the remainder be locally deposited. But the check did not clear; and bank officials found it had been stolen from a Texas environmental consulting firm, Maxim Technologies. Mr. Cardona, a local contractor, owns Just For Work. He was charged with second degree attempted grand larceny (maximum penalty: seven years). Arraigned in Southampton Town Justice court, Cardona's bail was set at $250,000. He could not meet it (perhaps his checkbook wasn't available) and he was sent to Suffolk County Jail in Riverhead.

Katisha Taylor, one of the defendants arrested when a riot broke out outside Lena's Bar in Flanders last summer, pled guilty to a reduced charge. Ms. Taylor had originally been charged with rioting and obstructing governmental administration. In a plea bargain, Taylor pled guilty to harrassment and was fined $315. Six others had been arrested along with Taylor, though it was estimated that over two hundred people took part in the melee.

MS. HAMPTONS BEAUTY

Dear Dan,

My name is Desire Agbozouhoue, and I am the founder of Teen, Miss & Ms. Hamptons International Beauty Pageants. The company is based in Southampton, Long Island, New York. Through the planning and management of international beauty pageants, we work to improve the effective interchange between beautiful role models around the world.

Teen, Miss & Ms. Hamptons International Beauty Pageants is created in the hope that it serves to deepen world understanding. Our beauty pageants in the Hamptons will not only obtain wide recognition for the Hamptons companies, but will also open up new possibilities of activities in the global market place.

Finally, Teen, Miss & Ms. Hamptons International Beauty Pageants is conceptualized as a business service to non-profit organizations in the Hamptons and around the world. The company serves as a clearinghouse for contributions and may choose to seek whatever formal approvals or recognition are necessary to facilitate charitable giving.

We would love to invite you, or your company to become a sponsor for the first annual Teen, Miss & Ms. Hamptons International Beauty Pageants in the Hamptons in October 2001. A complete sponsorship application is available for your review after we receive a positive feedback from you.

Please take your time to read the following material hereto enclosed. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely yours,
Desire Agbozouhoue

VERIZON SUPPORTS UNIFORM LAW

Dear Dan,

There has been considerable debate over the past several weeks about the use of wireless phones by drivers in motor vehicles. Some local ordinances restricting motorists' wireless phone use have been hotly contested and widely reported in the media.

On behalf of our 26 million customers and 30,000 employees, Verizon Wireless is taking the leadership role in promoting the responsible use of wireless phones while driving. As the nation's largest provider of wireless services, we strongly support the use of hands-free technology, education, and in some cases, state-wide legislation.

We believe legislation is best approached at the state level, and will support a well-thought-out law in New York that would require motorists to use hands-free devices while driving provided the legislation:

- recognizes the safety uses of wireless devices.
- explicitly exempts emergency calls.
- ensures complete uniformity across the state.
- assesses penalties equivalent to those imposed for careless driving.
- has a three-year phase-in period, similar to the seat-belt law, to allow consumers to upgrade their handsets to ensure hands-free capability.

We do not support local laws recently passed in Suffolk County, NY, Carteret, NJ, and Marlboro NJ. Town or county legislation restricting hand-held wireless phone use while driving will lead to a patchwork quilt of ordinances that will confuse drivers and be difficult to enforce.

We applaud the New Jersey Senate's recent unanimous decision to create a task force to study driver distractions because it will go a long way toward improving overall safety on our roadways. The task force will consider driver inattention by examining all driver distractions, including food consumption, changing a CD and reading a map.

We are educating our customers through safety tips in our Communications Stores, advertising and on our website, and by introducing a driver education program. Verizon Wireless is also a major supporter of the wireless industry's $9 million national education campaign. Since we are not manufacturers of handsets, we need our vendors to provide the hands-free technology. Therefore, we are requiring our phone manufacturers to include built-in speakerphone capability, voice-activated dialing functionality and a universal jack to support headsets by 2002. A number of phones we sell today do not have this capability.

Ultimately, it is up to each of us to drive responsibly. The best way to ensure this is through hands-free devices, statewide initiatives and using common sense.

Rick Conrad
Verizon Wireless

PRESIDENT OF THE U.S. HAMPTONS?

Dear Dan,

I just must relate to you how much you have delighted me with your Cell Phone commentary.

The other night I was in the diner with my friends talking about the world situation; The Middle East and the Presidential debates, when I interjected with "Did any of you read Dan Rattiner's story about the Cell Phone?"

"Yeah," said Brad. "Dan's Paper is full of serious problems laced with humor."

"What about that little insertion called Correction?" I chimed in. "He's talking about winter arriving and snow. His exact words were 'temperature at that hour was 39 degrees...' Funny, that George Washington's final words were, 'much such a day as yesterday in all respects. Mercury at 41'. Sounds to me he wants to be endorsed on the AUTONOMOUS ticket. PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES FROM THE HAMPTONS!"

Dan, you will get my vote!

Sincerely Yours,
Judy Slead,
New York City
